WAR & PEACE NATO 50-division war dream fades as Europe balks

THE North Atlantic Treaty Organization, blueprinted at Lisbon in February, looked more and more last week like a man (Washington) trying to drive a sick and balky mule (the West European "partners")—or a bad case of irresistible force and immovable object. After Britain and France had frankly said fulfilment of their part of the program was impossible, Robert S. Allen reported (8/9) that

Allen reported (8/9) that ... the Joint Chiefs of Staff are preparing to vigorously challenge British and French demands for another slowdown in defense buildup.
In Paris NATO chief Gen. Ridgway insisted the "partners" could fulfil their '52 goals, adding darkly that he had "no reliable evidence that the potential threat of armed aggression has in any way abated." (After Gen.
Gruenther's statement last March before the Senate Foreign Relations
Comm. that over-all Soviet armed forces have not increased since 1947, ces have not increased since 1947,

Ridgway could hardly rattle the bones any louder to scare the "partners."

BELGIUM CUTS ARMY: But within 24 hours Ridgway had reliable evidence that the '52 goals for NATO land forces would not be met—at least by one, and would not be met—at least by one, and probably by four or more divisions.

In Belgium, which alone of NATO countries had imposed a two-year conscription period, strikes and demonstrations and "minor mutinies among troops" (U.S. News, 8/15) forced the government to demand that France, Holland, Luxembourg and Italy increase their military service to the same near their military service to the same period. When they refused, Belgium cut its conscription period to 21 months. But already the day before this development AP, surveying from Washington the economic woes of the other NATO countries, summed up: "North Atlantic Treaty Goal Looks Impossible" (8/12).

What are the feelings toward America of the peoples of Europe, as Washington's rearming policy drives their economies nearer and nearer to bankruptcy? How do they feel about the recent Democratic and Republican conventions, both of which resolved to continue the same ruinous policy and enforce it on our "allies"? A few European com-

DESPITE official oratory you are dissatisfied and uneasy at not being "liked" by those whom you assist. You complain, for example, of the ingratitude of Europeans, in particular the French. Encouraged by the incense-bearers and sycophants whom you maintain here, you attribute that lack of grace to our graceless nature.

I do not know whether Gen. Eisenhower really said the French were 50% atheists and deca-dents; but that would not be an extraordinary point of view among you. In your own way it sums up the truth of that recent French pub-lic opinion survey which lic opinion survey which your friends are busy trying to suppress, according to which in France 60 to 70% are neutralist by sentiment at least. And you understand that it will be very difficult to make these neutralists into passion. neutralists into passion-

Do you have any more hance in Germany?
There are almost no commitments there; yet how strange it must be for you to have to admit that more than half the

that more than half the people—almost all their youth and their workers—do not want the arms you offer. You will certainly take note of that humiliating ingratitude. You will return that people to their former military masters who, at least, are willing to accept those arms. But to do what with them? You yourselves wonder, and you sometimes admit that you are not so sure of the fidelity of their alliance. fidelity of their alliance.

General Ridgway

You can certainly count more on Britain, which gains more than other's and risks far less in remaining your ally. But the vast tide of criticism, the mentators are willing to speak frankly: statements by two of them in France—Claude Bourdet, editor of the "neutralist" Observateur, and the editors of the sober monthly of socialist analysis Cahiers Internationaux, are excerpted below.

EUROPE does not believe in your promises, trembles at every one of your gestures; Asia and Africa despise you, for you have become the allies of their ancient exploiters. Is that all that your wealth and what was often your genuine generosity

No doubt you can continue on the road. You will be more and more armed, stronger and stronger, more and more praised by governments you maintain and by the money press (your money or simply Money). You will also be more and more estranged from the peoples, and so more and more isolated. Out of your strength and these artificial alliances will rise your stubbornness; out of your real isolation, the stubbornness of your adversaries. For all this we shall of your core determined to the process of the pro this, we shall all of us one day have to pay the price. On that day perhaps you will discover that it would have been better to have had less arms, less flatterers and more friends.

BENEATH all the dollars and armaments, you are stifling liberty, life and the very soul of peoples who were your friends. Because of this I ask you quite simply: leave us alone, that is best. Leave us alone—you must do it in your own interests as much as in ours.

... Leave us alone so we can rid ourselves of a press that is not your friend, merely your spokesman—and of governments of valets who hate you with servility. What is above all necessary for you, whatever your politics, is to know the truth about Europe. You will never get anything from the pre-sent leaders of our countries except the echo of your own desires reflected in their begging.

. . Leave us alone: be what you are, with your splendid qualities and tremendous faults, a people as extreme in everything as your Soviet enemy. Be yourselves, but be it at home.

By the editors of "Cahiers Internationaux"

WHAT honest person has not been troubled by the press reports from Chicago? Howlings, scalp dances, sirens and scuffles reduced to a simple primitivism by the noise of trumpets; elephants serenaded by pin-up girls with virtue as sparse as their dress; this stupefying spectacle with the characteristics of a circus midway, a students' ball and a tom-tom ceremonial—can it really be the solemn assembly charged with setting forth the program and choosing the leader of the West's most powerful state?

These men, these women stomping and shricking for 30 or 40 minutes without drawing breath as they threw paper streamers and confett to acclaim their candidate—but who voted in favor of the party platform in 2½ minutes: they were delegated party platform in 2½ minutes: they were delegated by that minority of citizens who interest themselves in public life. These people are the ones with the greatest maturity... When one reads the descrip-tion of these groups, each one seeking to drown out the voice of the other with the name of its favorite, one is terrified by the aboriginal char-acter of these manifestations of brute force and by the mental mechanism they reveal.

T is this nation, it is these people that think they have a mission to be the leader of humanity. Of course in Europe, too, conventions of an impassioned kind are not unknown, in which insults are some-times mingled with arguments; but never have these degenerated into mere blarings of trumpets—except perhaps during the recent past when certain parties have sought to draw the masses by a quasimechanical appeal to the surviving animalness in man. Where, where is democracy?

... Whether it is Eisenhower who gets chosen to lead what he calls "the crusade for freedom in the world," or whether it is his Democratic rival, it is horribly certain that this "liberty" will be, above all, freedom for the banks.

The Republicans in power will continue to stress their stranglehold over Western Europe "integrated" around Germany. The Democrats in power will continue to exhibit their aggressiveness in Asia to please the Republicans. None of these violent political struggles places partisans of a peaceful solution against partisans of the arms race. There is no conflict save over the priority of battlegrounds or the choice of instruments of death.

The Eisenhower vs. Stevenson "contest" recalls to mind:

Back in the days when the Union idea was germinating among the "lint tops" (contemptuous name for workers in the semi-feudal textile mill villages in the South), one smart owner figured to forestall organization in his mill by holding "elections" for a company union. When the workers rushed news of this move to the Textile Union headquarters, they were advised to watch which side the Boss favored most and then vote exactly the same way — opposite. Following election day, an organizer came to learn the outcome of the "elections." He was told "We ain't voted neither one side nor t'other." He remonstrated with the workers. "Weren't you told to see which side the Boss favored and then vote exactly the same way — opposite?" "That's just it," they explained; "the Boss, he favor both sides of 'em the same."

Well, they got their own union in the end: And we have the Progressive Party. Come on folks, let's make it Hallinan and Bass, 'cause the bosses favor Eisenhower and Stevenson, "both sides of 'em the same."

Glad to hear Rev. Stephen Fritchman of Los Angeles' 1st Unitarian Church (of which I am a memoer) and Belfrage met during the latter's visit to California. We think of Mr. Fritchman as a truly great leader — a humanist whose warm sympathies, courage in action and power with words are doing much to maintain peace and make possible human progress here and now—at the same time building for the better future.

This is true too, of course, of the GUARDIAN. When such forces work together, it seems that broad new areas of support must be forth-coming. (Mrs.) Ruth P. Koshuk

REPORT TO READERS

Up Hallinan!

A NEWS EVENT of deep importance to at least a million Ameri-A cans—and to people all over the world—took place last Sunday morning, Aug. 17, at a place called Stellacoom, Wash.

Vincent Hallinan, Progressive Party candidate for President, stepped off a launch from McNeil's Island federal prison, after serving nearly five months for contempt of court during his de-fense of labor leader Harry Bridges in the most celebrated labor frame-up case of our time.

For New Yorkers, the New York Times carried a three-inch story buried on an inside page. For people in communities not fortunate enough to have a "comprehensive" paper like the Times, the event was not covered at all.

Thus the only Peace candidate in the 1952 U.S. presidential elections entered upon his campaign with probably not more than 2% of American newspaper readers being made aware of it.

N HIS OWN PERSONAL EFFORT to break through the pressradio blackout on the Peace Campaign, Vincent Hallinan intends to make five speeches a day, as far and wide as he can travel in the ten weeks remaining before Election Day. For all the months he has been in prison, his running mate, Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass; his wife Vivian, and even the oldest of his six boys, have been carrying on the campaign—with almost complete disregard by the press.

The newspapers which will bring news of this stirring campaign to 1952 voters are precious few throughout America, and the GUARDIAN is unique among them in that it already reaches readers in more than 4,000 communities in every state.

Hallinan is in the fight in person now. What he and his campaigners say and do deserves to reach the voters just as certainly as Stevenson's equivocations on civil rights and labor and Eisenhower's plans to "liberate" a third of humanity which is already busy liberating itself.

50-division war dream is fading

BREAD PREFERRED: U.S. News

(8/15) explained it this way;

Plan was to get 50 combat-effective and reserve divisions ready to defend Europe by the end of this year. By 1954 there were to be 100 divisions. Now both target dates have been abandoned. . . Troubles all over Europe are arising from the fact that Europeans do not particularly like what the U.S. is trying to give them. Gift arms do not have the same appeal as gift bread.

Newsweek (8/18) reported the trouble from Paris:

OM Paris;

The black-market price of the franc had slipped from 385 to 425 to the $. Moneychanging touts around the Place de l'Opera were doing a brisk business with thousands of wide-eyed, foot-sore American tourists, [Premier] Pinay's "save the franc" campaign faced disastrous defeat, BRITAIN-STILL LESS FOOD: From London, where Commons had adjourned for 10 weeks telling the world Britain is on the brink of the gravest economic crisis since the war's end. GUARDIAN's Gordon Schaffer reported:

• FOOD: New cuts by Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler mean lower supplies than ever before in British history—with much of it certain to go into black market (half of home-produced eggs are sold on black market now). Prices of factory-canteen meals and of bread, milk and fish (plentiful but unrationed) are steadily going up.

• COST OF LIVING: Official figure, just

• COST OF LIVING: Official figure, just fumped another three points, does not show real extent of increase; e.g., clothing prices are down since textile slump, but statistics show people are buying less clothing because so much of their income is absorbed in necessities. Rents on houses and flats built since the war are going up.

• WAGES: 1½ million shop assistants whose raise of a few shillings was stopped by the Labor Ministry get just over $11 a week. Furniture workers do little better; employers have denounced an agreement to give them cost-of-living raises.

• UNIONS: In next few weeks they must decide whether to take strike action or accept failing living standards. Unions representing workers in shipbuilding and metals (on which the government heavily depends to increase British exports) agreed to post-pone a month a strike ballot on employers' refusal to meet $5.60-a-week raise claim. The miners' right-wing pres. Lawther, under members' pressure, has said the union will not tolerate government interference with wage negotiations (their $4.20-a-week raise claim was rejected). Railwaymen, whose raise claims were also rejected, must also decide on action soon.

All indications are that the Trades Union Congress Gen. Council will fall to get majority for "wages restraint" policy at next month's Margate conference; in any case, TUC decision can't bind individual unions.

• THE FUTURE: Failure by both Tories and Labour to offer any solution for the dilemma made the economic policy debate in Commons empty. Only, speaker to face the real problem was "Bevanite" former Bd, of Trade pres. Harold Wilson, who bluntly told the House there could be no recovery for Britain without drastic arms cuts, East-West trade, an end to dependence on U.S. The Wall St. Journal in a chiding edi.

West trade, an end to dependence on U.S. The Wall St. Journal in a chiding editorial saw the picture this way (8/15):
Like a bride who didn't want to go down the aisle in the first place, Western Europe is now dragging her feet when it comes to the housework. That her major chore is her own defense in a dangerous neighborhood doesn't seem to make any difference... [But! Uncle Sam can't be counted on to keep the cookie jar filled to the brim forever.

The puzzle: can Adlai solve it?

According to Howard K. Smtih (CBS from London, 8/17), some of the West European mule's stalling was due to a desire to wait for the U.S. elections to get clarity on future Washington foreign policy. But as AP's Russell Brines noted (8/12), "Eisenhower and Stevenson have indicated they see foreign policy in much the same way." (Here is Stevenson's last statement on foreign policy, excerpted from U.S. News preconvention interview 8/1):

olicy, excerpted from U.S. News preonvention interview 8/1):

The basic point is that the hard fact of Soviet Communist imperialism presents a real danger to the free world now and for an indeterminate period to come. . . I should expect that the Democratic platform will reaffirm every basic position taken by the Truman Administration. . . . I am opposed to the admission of Red China into UN; I regard it as a waste of time to speculate about a lot of hypothetical contingencies [concerning China's "deflance"]. . . . I believe in the maintenance in Europe of American forces for the period of time required to assure the protection of Europe. . . I see no reason why, if the nations of West Europe can attain a sufflicient degree of economic strength and stability, they should not ultimately provide all the ground forces necessary for their security.

THE GENERAL SPEAKS: In a first

THE GENERAL SPEAKS: In a first attempt at a foreign policy statement last week in Denver. Eisenhower said

In Egypt it's money

After "strong man" Naguib dethroned king Farouk, an army tank was sent to mount guard on the Natl. Bank of Egypt in Cairo. The people might have got ideas.

hope of obtaining by peaceful means freedom for the peoples behind the Iron Curtain in both Europe and Asia..."It would be immoral and un-Christian to negotiate a permanent agreement with forces which by every religious creed and moral precept are evil.... The policy of mere containment is uneconomic and will lead to national bankruptcy."... He did not give any time when he thought the peoples behind the curtain might be freed, nor did he guarantee that it could be accomplished without bloodshed...

Eisenhower in effect merely re-stated the Truman policy, without having any solution to suggest for its basic dilemma: the U.S. economy needs a war, but the allies without whom the war could not conceivably be successful face ruin in preparing for it. It remained for Democratic Presidential candidate Stevenson to solve if he could the puzzle of getting the W. European mule to move.

ATOMIC LIBERATION: Meanwhile the attempt to turn the peoples of the socialist countries against their govern-ments continued as Truman appointed Adm. Kirk, former ambassador to Moscow and recently head of the Commit-tee for Liberation of the Peoples of Russia, to head the Psychological Strategy Board. Kirk's job was to persuade the socialist peoples that the U.S., which completely surrounds them with A-bomb bases and whose press regularly publishes diagrams of how they are to be atomized, is their friend. On the day before the Kirk appointment, the N. Y. Times carried adjacent p. 1 headlines:

imes carried adjacent p. 1 headines;

Middle East: crusts for starving peasants In the poverty- and disease-stricken Middle Fast "stranger was a stricken

Middle East, "strong men" sought to keep their feudal countries within the "free world" by making small concessions, at least on paper, to the peasants' demand for land. Egypt's Gen. Naguib called for government buying of all farm holdings in excess of 200 or 500 acres; paying landlords in 3.25% treasury bonds; selling the land to peasants holding less than two acres who would pay the government in 30 annual in-stalments. In Iran Dr. Mossadegh proposed adding an extra 16% to the peas-ant's theoretical 20% share of the crops.

Whether such measures would satisfy the peasants was the unanswered ques tion. In India, where the government's policy is similar to Naguib's proposals. the peasants have already compared it unfavorably with that of the Kashmir government of Sheik Abdullah. While India and Pakistan struggled over control of Kashmir, Abdullah won broad popularity by quietly expropriating the landlords' estates without compensation, distributing the land to the peas-ants who were to get full title after paying the government 50% of the crop the first year, 25% the second. The Iranian Bakhter Emruz indicated what peasant reaction might be like in Iran and in Egypt:

In a country with 2,000 kilometers [1,250 miles] of frontier with a great Communist state, to maintain the status of the peasants as it is . . . is a kind of public suicide. . . . The danger of revolution will not disappear [until] peasants . . . are made owners of the lend when landlordiem by restricted. til] peasants . . . are made owners of land, when landlordism is restricted, feudalism is destroyed. N Korea, where U.S. protege Syngman Rhee swept back into office again man knee swept back into once again in "a shameful farce that passed for a presidential election" (New Statesman & Nation, 8/16), the U.S. continued its "get tough" policy. #### Malan jails African leader

N South Africa, where the Malan government has already in two months jailed over 2,500 African, Indian and Colored resisters to jimcrow laws, the police arrested Glasgow-educated African leader Dr. J. S. Moroka on charges of "promoting the objects of communism." After being fingerprinted, Dr. Moroka was released on $280 bail, pending trial on Aug. 26. ing trial on Aug. 26.

Commenting on Dr. Moroka's arrest, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, leading U. S. authority on African history and culture,

ority on African history and culture, said:

"If people could know the full story of the tremendous thing that is taking place in South Africa, I am sure they would eagerly welcome the opportunity of expressing their support through the petitions now heing circulated by the Council on African Affairs (53 W. 125th St., N. Y. C. 27).

"The very least we can do is to sign the petitions and get others to sign and contribute—and speedily. We must send funds without delay to aid the victims of the Malan regime's racist oppression.

"If we cannot do that, if we will not help the Africans' fight for democratic rights, we have already lost half the battle for democratic rights here at home."

'Ban napalm' outcry grows in Britain

SINCE the Archbishop of York, England, recently condemned use of the napalm bomb in Korea, Britons of all classes and politics have taken up the issue: last week the campaign still grew as the campaign soil grew to force their government to demand a ban on the weapon. To many the Archbishop's stand raised a further question: what should church members in Britain's armed forces in Korea do

News (Aug. 1) asked:
What does the Archbishop say they should do? Would he have them refuse?
From the Archbishop no reply was reported. But 750 persons overflowing a Preston (Lancashire) church for a Methodist Peace Fellowship meeting were told by Dr. Donald Soper, preselect of the Methodist Conference:

"We ask ourselves what we may do when
... we are plunged into the midst of war.
Are we legitimately entitled to use the weapons of war? I want to say under the theology which I accept we are not.

MRS. KIM YANG SUN London Worker reporter Winnington (who took the photo) thus describes her sdition more than a year after she s napalm-bombed: "She can sleep about half an hour at a time before wakened by pain. After being

"I don't believe the Russians are peculiar people. I believe the Americans are as peculiar as the Russians, It is no good telling me the Red Dean [the Dean of Canterbury] is a scoundrel and you can't believe a word he says whilst a country like America is producing germs for germ warfare."

"BURNING PEOPLE ALIVE": Another well-attended public meeting, held recently in London under joint auspices of Science for Peace and the Medical Assn. for Prevention of War, unanimously resolved:

This meeting deplores the use of the napalm bomb by UN forces in Korea, and urges the British government to declare itself opposed to its employment.

Reginald Thompson, former Korea

Reginald Thompson, former Korea war correspondent for the conservative Daily Telegraph and author of Cry Korea, described the "deluging of people with this petrol jelly, regarding them as 'gooks' not real people," and warned that "if war spreads it will be an atom-bomb war, and this island cannot survive it." He doubted if "absocannot survive it." He doubted if "absolute proof" of U. S. use of germ warfare would ever be produced, but reverting to the napalm horror said:

"We are burning people alive in Korea. Surely there is enough going on that we know about to make us determined to take action to stop it as soon as possible."

Dr. Michael M. Tempest, Fellow of the Povel. College of Surgeons and plactic

Royal College of Surgeons and plastic surgery specialist, said burns caused by surgery, specialist, said burns caused by A- and H-bombs in a future war would be beyond the power of medical science to cope with; "appalled at the prospect," he demanded immediate banning of these weapons and of napalm which "... is being used now in the name of UN. Surely THIS was not the kind of purpose for which UN was created."

Arnall insists prices will rise sharply

WHEN steel companies were per-suaded into a strike settlement by a $5.20-a-ton price rise, head price stabilizer Ellis G. Arnall predicted the consumer would pay $100 apiece for that "compromise." He forecast sharp price rises on all sides for the fall, then despairing of anything like price stabi-lity handed in his resignation.

Last week Truman had not vet accepted it. Returning to his desk from a visit to his Georgia home, Arnall repeated his dire forecasts, unconvinced by Agriculture Secy. Brannan and Commerce Secy. Sawyer who belittled Commerce Secy. Sawyer who belittled possible rises. Arnall's argument seemed hard to beat. He said:

"After all, I sit at the desk signing enough [increases] made mandatory under the new economic controls law to know what I'm talking about. There seem to be two schools of thought in this country. One holds that prices are going to go down and are going to keep going down. The other school foresees a steady pattern of rising prices and wages which eventually will give us a country populated by 153,000,000 undernourished millionaires whose money won't buy the things they need."

It's THE DROUGHT: Arnall predicted

IT'S THE DROUGHT: Arnall predicted that the drought was still to be felt in consumers' pocketbooks where, with the drought as a pretext, the real "disaster" will occur with soaring food prices, par-will occur with soaring food prices, particularly fruits and vegetables decontrolled last spring.

Here are samples of how some items have risen since lids were removed: soybeans up 22%, cottonseed 18.1%, corn oil 13.9%, tallow 7.1%, lard 4.2%, cattle hides and skins 19%, cotton yarns 4.6% (Journal of Commerce, July 31.)

THE LAST BUCK: An admission that the U.S. people are worse off than they were a year ago was contained in the 1952 Survey of Consumer Finances, published in the July Federal Reserve Bulletin. The survey showed median incomes had risen from $3,000 to $3,200 -7% before taxes—but that consumer rices, even according to Bureau of Labor Statistics which understates the Labor Statistics which understates the rise, rose 9%. Conclusion:

Since personal income taxes also rose substantially during 1951 it is apparent that prices rose somewhat more than average disposable income.

By Elmer Bendiner

THE airborne Secy. of State Acheson has publicly congratulated himself on his fine reception in Brazil. Details of that reception came to the GUAR-DIAN last week from Brazilian correspondents:

In Rio alone Acheson's effigy was publicly buried 20 times. He was "hanged" in other cities. In the downtown streets of Rio pigs were loosed with "Acheson" written on their flanks. When he went to Rio's press building for an interview he had to ignore a message painted in foot-high letters:

Fora Acheson" (Acheson, Go Home). The Brazilians he conferred with undoubtedly accounted for the cordiality. He talked with Foreign Minister Joao

Neves de Fontoura (also president of Compania Ultragas, Socony-Vacuum subsidiary); with Finance Minister Horacio Lafer (associated with duPont).

The rest of President Vargas' cabinet reads like a U.S. sales force: Labor Minister Sejadas Viana, before his present appointment, was a lawyer for Standard Oil of N.J.; Ricardo Jeffet, Bank of Brazil president, shares man-ganese mines with U.S. Steel; Educa-tion Minister Simons is connected with Electric Bond & Share Co.

A YANKEE SHOW: Brazil's government fluttering around Acheson reflects

Brazil's economy. The land is owned by Brazilians, but controlled by the U.S. Coffee, owned by Brazilian planters, is exported under control of six U.S. companies which arbitrarily fix prices so panies which arottarny hx prices so that even pro-U.S. elements among the planters have protested. Braze plant cotton in their own fields at export and even internal marketing of seed and oil are in the hands of Anderseed and on are in the hands of Anderson, Clayton. Armour, Swift and Wilson (with one British competitor) control not only the export of meat but its distribution in Brazil's large cities. Wheat mills are run by Bunge Corp. of New York. Chemicals are monopolized by Parke-Davis. Three-quarters of the nation's electrical energy, telephone, gas for home consumption are con-trolled by Bond & Share. The manganese of some provinces is earmarked ntirely for U.S. Steel, others for Bethlehem.

But Acheson's visit to Rio was far more than a business executive's tour of a successful district office. He carried two problems in his briefcase: a mili-tary pact, and oil.

BUT NOT QUITE: Brazil's negotiators signed a military treaty with the U.S. four months ago but it still has not been ratified by Brazil's Congress. Both Vargas and his predecessor Dutra tried to push through bills granting oil rights to U.S. companies; both were stymied in Brazil's Congress. If the Brazilian pact follows the pattern set by Ecuadorian and Chilean pacts it might empty oil out the back way under the guise of emergency defense material.

Official State Dept, interest in over-seas investments of the oil companies has long been on the record. In 1945 hearings before the Special Senate Committee investigating petroleum sources, State Dept. petroleum a Charles Rayner said the Dept.

The American Labor Party, citing examples like the end of federal rent control on Sept. 30 and the recently-approved 40% hike in the price of canned baby foods, has urged the President to call a special Congress session this year to enact effective price and rent controls. ON Sunday Vincent Hallinan, after six months in McNeil Island penitentiary, stepped ashore at Tacoma a free man and running for President. The PP nominee was met by exec. secy. C. B. Baldwin and cheering delegates from Washington, California, Oregon.

People's World correspondent Terry Pettus reported that the prison launch was convoyed by the yacht "Patrick Henry," with pennants and welcome signs flying and Irish airs playing over the water.

With the delegation meeting l nan was Reuben Borough, Progre candidate for U.S. Senator in Ham-nan's home state of California. Halli-of the companies."

With Brazil's economy so thoroughly tied to U.S. big business, with the big planters and industrialists in the government saddle, with U.S. missions (under Point 4 or earlier "aid" plans) in every ministry, there might be some wonder why Brazil should need Acheron's personal troubleshooting son's personal troubleshooting.

The answer lies in the mood and or-ganization of Brazil's people. They are closer to a forceful assertion of their independence than any other South American people. Brazilian industrial-American people. Brazilian industrialists, pressed by U.S. big business, disturbed by a barrier to industrial materials raised by U.S. war preparations, welcomed the recent Moscow trade conference. Eleven delegates, all quietly supported by average of the conference of the conferen supported by government and press, went to Moscow. Brazilian working men and women rallied to the trade conference too, called it "the greatest setback to imperialism since Stalingrad."

WATCH OUT, A GENERAL: A year ago, when police broke up a demonstra-tion for defense of the country's resources in the center of Rio, they found themselves swinging batons at four generals of the army and a staff of colonels. Unique among American armies the Brazilian army has a democratic tradition of siding with the parties in a crisis. (It figured in the for independence and emancipation of the slaves.) The wealthy classes have always scorned the army.

When Vargas proposed sending 25,000 troops to Korea in March, 1951, he was stopped by a wave of demonstrations and strikes

The working people of Brazil, driven by hunger from the land, seek work at miserable wages in the cities. (A pair a decent shoes costs a textile worker half a month's salary.) demand release of 15 of their leaders. Police fired, two men and a woman were killed; some 20 wounded.

Brazil's Communist Party-illegal but powerful-elected in 1950 two congress men, four deputies to the Federal District legislature. They ran on party tickets created for electoral purposes; five days before election announced themselves as Communists, listed the manifesto of Luis Carlos Prestes (Com-munist leader and national hero in hiding) as their platform, and won. One of the Federal District deputies since has been elected by the legislature as secretary and, as representative of an illegal party, uses a government limousine with government chauffeur.

VARGAS STREET: The illegal CP publishes 27 publications: dailies, weeklies, monthlies, factory bulletins. In 1945 it won a majority of the Federal District legislature and 15 seats in the Congress, is generally credited with greater strength now.

Had Acheson taken time to tour the wretched slum of the Favella Jacare Zinho, outside Rio, he would have seen rows of hovels with garbage draining in an open ditch down the dirt road. The residents have rigged up a street sign: "Getulio Vargas Street."

in 1932. Among the groups that gathered on the street after the meeting, one man asked hopefully: "Are they going to do this every Wednesday?'

going to do this every Wednesday?"
On the eve of hard-fought primaries, the rally lent a platform to Senate candidate Corliss Lamont, who ridiculed "the midgets in the seats of the mighty"; to Congressional candidates Carl Lawrence, Amsterdam News reporter, who said: "I'm a Democrat. I'm not too ashamed of it. I'm here because I believe in freedom" and Andronicus I believe in freedom," and Andronicus Jacobs, rank-and-file longshore leader who told how Republocrats in labor as in politics tried "to box the Negro out." BIANCHI CONFIDENT: Key figure in New York's primary contests was Sen. Wm. J. Bianchi, lone progressive voice at Albany who had waged a knock-down fight against the GOP machine backing wealthy red-baiting Dr. Charles Muzzi-cato. The contest, set for Aug. 19, came too late for GUARDIAN press time, but on primary eve Bianchi said he expect-ed to win the GOP designation in what would be a nationally significant repu-diation of GOP bosses by rank and file. In any case Bianchi, running on an

ALP ticket, would draw GOP votes after a brilliant first-term record of fighting for civil rights and labor legislation.

SPARKMAN'S "IDEALS": Labor officialdom, both AFL and CIO, seemed to have little difficulty in swallowing Alabama's Sparkman for V.-P. At Atlantic City the administrative committee of AFL's political arm, Labor's League for Political' Education, decisively voted down the traditional AFL position against any political endorsements. (Last formal AFL nod was to La Follette in 1924.) Though the AFL exec council invited Truman, Eisenhower and Stevenson to address their convention next month in New York, there was little doubt AFL would back the Stevenson-

Sparkman ticket.
The CIO exec. board, meeting in Washington, endorsed the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket as an insurance of "unfaltering continuation" o Deal and Fair Deal traditions."

THE NEW WINDOW: Labor leaders' endorsements seemed unlikely to repair all the damage done to both parties by television, which for the first time had given voters a "window on the smoke-filled room." The Nation (Aug. 16), with that phrase as a title, published the TV impressions of a writer with the recorder.

lished the TV impressions of a writer with the pseudonym Douglas Foster:

What I saw convinced me that Republicans and Democrats alike were simply doing their best to camouflage steam rollers to look like band wagons and phony drafts to look like spontaneous calls to service, all for the benefit of the television audience... Rarely have I sensed the unfolding of a secret plot so plainly as during those minutes of near-silence when the camera silently followed Big Jim Farley as he stalked from delegation to delegation, passing "the word."... The convention was a gigantic example of that proverbially American phenomenon, "the fix."... I wanted to Jump to the rostrum and scream "Hoax! Hoax!"... I could not forgive America this fatuous exhibition of phoniness.

Fair trial 'impossible." say political victims

SIX Smith Act defendants in Pittsburgh, Pa., were in court last week for hearing of pre-trial motions. Their main argument was that a fair trial on the charge of conspiring to teach and advocate overthrow of the government is impossible in that city.

Sanity corner

NEW YORK—When students register at N. Y. University during Sept., they will use forms from which ques-tions about race and religion have been eliminated.

The change was hailed by the NAACP as a step forward in its campaign against discrimination.

After pressure from students in the wake of the fatal shooting by a guard of Enus Christiani (GUAR-DIAN, 6/12), NYU last week hired its first Negro guard.

Among the facts they cited: that three of their number are already under conviction of violating a state sedition law and one. Steve Nelson, is denied bail pending the appeal; they have been unable to acquire adequate counsel—700 Pittsburgh lawyers have refused to represent them: Pittsburgh jury lists are compiled from names submitted by big employers and by "respectable" or-ganizations like the American Legion. On the jury question, proof was offered that no names are ever solicited from unions or from Negro, Jewish, Catholic or national group organizations. It is also a practice of big employers to "co-operate" by making up the difference of jury pay and the salaries of their employes chosen for jury duty.

CALIF. BAIL FIGHT: In California a popular campaign was under way to win bail pending appeal for 14 Smith Act defendants recently convicted there. Although trial judge William Mathes had been overruled by higher courts three times on the setting of bail at the start of the case, he announced himself "unreconsructed" on the ques-tion. By the end of the week, the U.S. Appeals Court announced it would rethe case, ordered bail to be

Mrs. Bass brings alternative to Harlem

IKE all Negro communities, New York's Harlem still struggles in the dilemma posed by the old parties' "sellout" of civil rights. Rep. A. Clayton Powell has offered one answer: don't vote any national ticket. Last Wednesday Harlem heard another answer, on a Lenox Av. corner from an American Labor Party sound truck. The 400 or more Harlemites who gathered there relished Progressive Party Vice-Presidential candidate Mrs. Charlotta Bass's assault on "Cadillac leaders who tell us all is well on the western front." The only Negro and only woman candidate for top national office asked:

"Are we going to continue to be fooled by these people [the old parties] who have used us as a balance of power?"

Fresh from a midwestern tour, she said that in Ohio her people had called out to her:

"We are coming, Charlotta. We are coming two million strong."

If the Negro people protest the sellout in that or greater strength, she said, then there can be no "lost vote" because "win or lose, we win."

AGAINST THE "MIDGETS": The crowd needed little convincing on the record of Democratic V.-P. candidate Sparkman. What plainly weighed heaviest on them was that fear of a "lost" protest vote. ALP chairman Vito Marcantonio reminded them of the protest vote for Debs in 1920 which, he said, led to the bigger vote for La Follette in 1924 and to the New Deal

THE PRESS 'Liberal' L. A. sheet yields to witch-hunt, fires top staff man

THE Los Angeles Daily News has many times heaped editorial scorn on witch-hunters of the House Un-American Activities Committee and those who knuckled under to them. Then it, too, knuckled under.

The News has fought sporadic crusades against police brutality and witch-hunting, for slum clearance and minority rights. Among the paper's crusaders was Vern Partlow, top re-write and special assignment writer, former political editor, with the paper since 1940, up to last month engaged in a public housing expose.

Partlow is also an active leader of the CIO American Newspaper Guild serving on several contract negotiating committees; and a top-notch political balladeer whose "Old Man Atom" made juke boxes all over the country until Columbia Records withdrew it.

THE PURGE: Before Un-AAC witch-hunters, Mrs. Alice Judson Bennett, ex-wife of the News' ex-city editor, named Partlow as a "communist." Other witnesses named another News staffer Darr Smith, who had been with the paper since 1936 and, like Partlow, is a Guild leader. Smith had been let go during an economy staff reduction.

After they were named, Smith was dropped from the preferential hiring list; Partlow was called in, asked by management to take what amounted to a "loyalty oath." He refused, was fired. The L.A. Newspaper Guild unani-mously voted to back both and followed contract procedure to the final stage: arbitration before Dr. Paul Dodd of the University of California at Los Angeles. Like the News, Dodd had won liberal acclaim by fighting against compulsory loyalty oaths on the campus.

The Guild argued that the firings violated the News' contract, the Guild constitution (which bars discrimination because of political conviction as well as race and religion) and the U.S. Bill of Rights. The Guild offered in support of its case News editorials chiding other employers for firing victims of the witch-hunt. Management agreed Partlow and Smith had "slanted" a story, were identified with the paper's best campaigns.

LESSON IN "LIBERALISM": Last week Dodd handed down his decision upholding the firing. Summed up, his opinion—which may have far-reaching effects on what remains of U.S. press freedom-is:

As a "liberal" paper the News is vul-nerable to adverse criticism for retaining men like Partlow and Smith, publicly named as communists.

• Therefore the paper had the right to demand that Partlow clear himself, and Smith (who was never called in by management) had the obligation to come in "on his own initiative" to deny statements made about him.

Dedd declared the world is shaken

Dodd declared the world is shaken by an ideological war which demands that all on our side stand up and be that all on our side stand up and be counted for "peace, private enterprise and freedom." Though ruling that Partiow and Smith could be required to "clear themselves," he denied that this interfered with individual freedom, freedom of the press, or that it sanctioned loyalty oaths.

On hearing the arbitrator's ruling, Partlow cited Thomas Jefferson:

artiow cited Thomas Jefferson:
It behooves every man who values liberty of conscience for himself, to resist invasions of it in the case of others; or their case may, by change of circumstances, become his own. It behooves him, too, in his own case, to give no example of concession, betraying the common right of independent opinion by answering questions of faith, which the laws have left between God and himself.

White chauvinism: 'Let's get mad--and get on with the job'

Mrs. Eslanda Goode Robeson, Progressive Party candidate for Congresswoman-at-large from Connecticut, has sent us the following important letter to progressives with a request for early publication.

ENFIELD, CONN.

'M just about fed up with white chauvinism: with end-less manifestations of it—and endless discussions about it.

I have been fighting white chauvinism all my life, and intend to continue fighting it till I die. It is a problem that must be solved not only if we are ever to achieve solid Negrowhite unity, but if we are ever to have normal human relations and peace in our country and in the world. I can get as mad as anybody over the in-furiating (however unconscious) manifestations of it.

But I don't plan to spend 24 hours a day getting mad. A progressive has many grave and urgent problems which demand his attention and energy. If he spends full time strug-gling with only one of them, however important (and fighting white chauvinism is very important), he is a little out of balance.

GET MAD AND GO ON: Late ly, at many meetings I've attended, discussions about white chauvinism have taken up a lot of time. I say discuss it, yes; always try to correct it, yes. But I want to get on with my work—so I plan to get mad, speak my piece in no uncertain terms, then go on to the next item on the agenda.

Every progressive, Negro and white, has a seemingly inexhaustible fund of stories ilhaustible fund of stories il-lustrating white chauvinism. But I submit that we have more to do at our meetings than tell stories. A couple of stories, yes, if they illustrate a point about which there is ignorance or confusion. I would like to tell a story now. It happened at a rather important meeting in New York.

A serious-minded, middle-aged member with a long history of militant activity and loyalty had come there to lis-ten to the speakers. Behind her were two much younger women who talked continuously. We are all familiar with such people who come to meetings seemingly to visit with each other rather than listen.

The middle-aged woman, exasperated, finally turned around to the younger women and said: "Shut up!"

EXPLOSIVE ELEMENT: G/od for her, you probably think. But you'd better be careful. The explosive element happened to be present. The older woman happened to be white, the younger women Negro.

Immediately the cry of "white chauvinism" was raised. The business of the meeting was interrupted, the rest of the evening was given over to a discussion of white arrogance, the distressed and bewildwhite woman was expelled.

Now I submit this was carrying things too far. I under-stand fully that the young Negro woman, and the Negro people, have had to take a lot of the poison of white chauvin-ism in our time, and are right to be on the alert for more of the same. But I do not think this was more of the same.

I also submit that the white woman, and all white people, have got to bear the burden of long history of humiliatinsulting, arrogant, of-ive and murderous be-tor toward the Negro peo-But I do not think this fensive and instance was more of the same,

INCREASING THE STRAIN: Let me make this clear: I am not inferring that all white middle-aged women come to meetings to listen, and all young Negro women come to visit. Interest and attention, thoughtlessness and rudeness, are found in every group.

But if we try to combat white chauvinism in this unreason-able way we will frighten many white people into chronic ner-vousness and silence, and envousness and silence, and en-courage chips on the shoulders of some Negroes. Instead of building solid Negro-white unity we will increase, not dim-inish, the strained unnatural relations between Negro and white Americans. And these strained, unnatural relationare a real, practical problem. relations

THROUGH THE JUNGLE: Many white progressives ask me why more Negroes do not come out to their meetings, why they seem unable to make Negroes feel welcome. This is a very embarrassing question. It very embarrassing question. It seems silly to have to point out at this late date that Negroes are people, and welcome is welcome, and when people are truly welcome they feel wel-

Why, many white progressives ask, do not more Negroes join the Progressive Party, which is working for their interests? It seems silly to point out that most Negroes know what their best interests are, and if they are asked, not told what they are, there would be more meeting of minds.

Many white progressives complain it is hard to become friendly with Negroes. Again it seems silly to point out that anyone who knows how to make friends, and wants to take the trouble, can make friends—and friends can have any color.

There are no set rules in these matters: each individual has to work his or her way through the fascinating jungle of human relations. But thoughtfulness, knowledge of the background and history, sensitivity to each situation, human courtesy and warmth, and forthright admission of the terrible responsibility for past performance of white toward Negro—these will help remove the unseen formidable barriers. LESSONS FROM LIFE: I trust no one will think I am mini-mizing the danger of white chauvinism, or hedging or appeasing or retreating. I am not. I may even be leading the procession against white arrogance and supremacy—in the large, that is, not in the details. For I believe that in this particular time in world history we Negro Americans will have to lead our white fellow-citizens in the struggle for peace, freedom and friendship in this new, One World. Not because I believe Negroes are superior, but because we are more experienced in the practical business of understanding, coping with and surviving restriction, double-talk and persecution than our

We Negroes know that when the Republican and Democratic parties promise peace, security, democracy and freedom, they do not mean and never have meant these blessings for every one everywhere. That when they speak of equality they mean it only for those people and nations whom they arbitrarily select to designate as equal. That when they speak democratic representation they do not mean it for the Negro people. We know what it means to be under siege. have been, and still are, the victims of a Cold War against us, right here in the U.S. Sometimes this Cold War waxes hot, with bombs and bullets.

white brothers and sisters.

LEADERSHIP: An experienced discerning white friend in Chicago said recently:

"We white people have never been under slege until now, and we don't know what to do. You Negro people have always been under attack; you have accum-ulated the experience we all need now; we hope you will give us the benefit of it."

In this new world white colonials can no longer hide that they are the minority, and former colonial countries whose populations are mostly colored peoples are emerging as powerful and strategically impor-tant nations. One can well im-agine that the Negro people, themselves greatly experienced in colonial treatment, are far better able to understand the sensitivities, hopes and prob-lems of these billions of new world citizens. Therefore I say again, the Negro people will and should become the natural leaders in this new era.

Some years ago I remember rying to persuade Paul to accept a part in what then seemed to be a very good play. No, he said firmly, and I thought then too arbitrarily; I won't play the part of a Negro who fails however magnigro who fails, however magnificently, or dies for however noble a cause; the Negro I play must succeed, and live to lead, because that's what the Negro in real life is going to do.

As usual he was right-and as usual, somewhat in advance of the general trend; but where else should a leader be, if not out in front?

- AND WORK: White people everywhere are going to have to overcome and live down the myth of white supremacy which has been so carefully bred into them for generations. When they have lived down this myth, and worked out a pattern of behavior fit for hu-man beings, then Negroes will have to overcome and live down the suspicion, bitterness and hatred which white su-premacy has engendered. This will not come overnight—but it will happ if we all keep working at it.
I am not a gradualist. I know we must keep fighting white chauvinism day after day, night after night. Bu let us fight it, work at it, talk about it every hour on the hour—and use the rest of our time for equally urgent matters.
