McCarthy rally fizzles, but cries of hate chill Madison Square Garden

ON the top balcony of Madison Sq. Garden on Monday night, Nov. 29, banner flapped: "American-Irish a banner flapped: "American-Irish Minute Men of 1939." The seats around it were empty. The whole top balcony was deserted, mocking predictions of "Ten Million American For Justice" rallying that night in Sen. Joseph Mc-Carthy's greatest bid for popular trucks stood ready to pipe the rally to waiting throngs. There were none. The Garden holds 22,000; police estimated the crowd at 13,000. Admission was free and the rally was widely bally-hooed, not only in the press but in many churches and parochial schools. Simultaneous rallies set for Los Angeles and Chicago were canceled.

CRIES FOR BLOOD: Filling the rear half of the Garden floor were large contingents from New Jersey who ar-rived a half-hour early in chartered buses. They were the best-organized, waving placards as at a political con-vention indicating delegations from Secaucus, Weehawken, Bayonne, Jersey Secaucus, weenawken, Bayonne, Jersey City. Most were middle-aged or elderly and many were women, a few clutching confederate flags. New Yorkers who came under their own steam numbered less than 10,000

In hat bands and breast pockets were paper signs reading: "God Bless Mc-Carthy." It was a restless crowd, eager for excitement, relishing every epithet hurled from the speakers' stand and tossing some themselves, waiting to be triggered into action. It took little to touch them off. An attractive, smartly-dressed young Life photographer, Lisa Larsen, did it. She walked down the center aisle shooting the crowd. A woman jumped up. shouting: "She's a Communist!" The cry was taken up and in an instant from all parts of the Garden came shouts of "Hang her!" and "Throw her out!" Men and women who had never seen Miss Larsen, and saw nothing of the original incident, stood on their chairs and shouted epithets. Roman Catholic priests who were scattered in sizeable numbers throughout the audience stood up but said nothing. up but said nothing.

JOE WAS MISSING: Former Gov. of N. J. Charles Edison, who was speaking at the time, stepped away from the microphone and a powerfully-built soprano was rushed up. She began to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" while cries of "Throw her out!" continued. The pandemonium went on until Miss Larsen was ushered out by a policewoman and several Garden guards.

The incident revealed more than the the incident revealed more than the crowd's hunger for action. Throughout the evening the press was a target. Near the press box hecklers shouted at the reporters. Hiss free, begins fight to dispel the myth about him

ALGER HISS A

WM. REMINGTON

REED on Nov. 27 from Lewisburg (Pa.) federal penitentiary after serving three years and eight months there. Alger Hiss was given a lusty round of cheers from fellow-inmates crowded to the jail windows. Quietly and without notes the former State Dept. official and adviser to Franklin D. Roosevelt told a mass of reporters, photographers and radio men that he would "renew with more enthusiasm" his efforts to expose "the enthusiasm" his efforts to expose "the fantastic inventions that politicians and members of the press have been free to invent about me"; and that the success of these efforts would "assist in the allaying of the hysteria and fear of these days." Reasserting his "complete innocence" of spy charges laid against him by ex-Time editor Whittaker Chambers, he said he was confident the "myth that has been developed... the deception that has been foisted upon the American people" could be dispelled. Hiss was sent to jail for perjury in denying the Chambers for perjury in denying the Chambers charges, after he had brought suit against Chambers for libel.

against Chambers for libel.

The cheers of Hiss' fellow-inmates were almost drowned out by a Time-Life helicopter hovering for a "picture of the week." Hiss behaved agreeably with the press which responded by publishing the address of his New York apartment on page one (N.Y. Times and Herald Tribune); one paper published a full description of Hiss' attorney's car in which the party left the prison. The Times said that "a gathering of about 100 persons stared as the Hiss family and his two attorneys" entered the house in downtown New York. It said both the Velde and Jenner committees were "interested" in calling Hiss for questioning.

In Miami, Fla., to begin probing "sub-versives" whose "contempt" convictions for not answering grand jury questions were reversed by Florida's Supreme Court, inquisitor Velde said his committee "won't call Hiss if he has nothing new to say."

MURDER: On the same day that Hiss came home, the wife of another Lewis-burg prisoner, William Remington, buried her husband in New Jersey; he buried her husband in New Jersey; he had been murdered in his cell by three young auto thieves. After the brutal assault, reports immediately began circulating of political connotations (Remington was convicted of perjury in denying former Communist Party membership) and of some connection between the murder and Hiss' impending liberation.

According to information the GUAR-DIAN believes to be reliable, the motive of Remington's murderers in breaking into his cell and attacking him with a brick was simple larceny; without friends to send them eigarette money from outside, they sought to steal from Remington's locker. Indications were that the stories of Lewisburg inmates' hatred for "reds" were deliberately spread by the FBL.

Frustration or ignorance?

Frustration or ignorance?
CLEVELAND HEIGHTS, O.
Some political analysts say the close vote in the election indicates frustration of the voters. Is this not a misinterpretation? Doesn't it show that most voters could not distinguish much difference between the two parties and therefore could not make a decided choice? It might also be construed that the close vote was due to the voters' ignorance, as certainly no intelligent citizen would vote for either of the parties.

The old parties don't speak for the people, but represent privileged interests. Most of the voters are wage workers and there needs to be labor party. Joseph Manlet

I'm just as firmly convinced as to the overwhelming merit of the ALP after having voted Row D as I was before election day. My sincere congratulations to John T. McManus for his participation in the gubernatorial race and the leadership that he inspires to all who celieve in a decent and independent third party. We only lost an election but we maintained the basis for an honest and dignified voting apparatus. We may be off the ballot temporarily, but the ALP program is still the only decent one that is around. And I'd rather be right than vote for a phony for governor. So let's allow the issues to rip these coming months, call a Democrat a Democrat, a reactionary a Republicart and the best party in the land the American Labor Party (Progressive Party).

REPORT TO READERS

Our 6th birthday dinner

THE GUARDIAN'S BIRTHDAY DINNER Nov. 30 filled the Hotel

THE GUARDIAN'S BIRTHDAY DINNER Nov. 30 filled the Hotel Astor ballroom in New York City with a most reassuring muster of some of the finest, fightingest people in Gotham.

We had a topflight evening together of laughter, song, uncommon good sense and fond recollection and compliments. Our chairman again this year was the great and gifted Dr. W. E. B. DuBois. Last year Dr. DuBois' companions on the dais included Vito Marcantonio and Emanuel H. Bloch. Death has stilled both these historic voices in the past year. Dr. DuBois recalled them in his introductory remarks: "Marc," whose "fine memory remains and is with us, here and now"; and "Manny," whose co-counsel in the Rosenberg defense, Gloria Agrin, was one of this year's speakers.

Miss Agrin, who is now a member of the legal staff fighting the government's effort to deport GUARDIAN Editor Cedric Belfrage, spoke feelingly of Bloch's premature death, "the product of these bitter times," and paid tribute on behalf of the late Ethel and Julius Rosenberg to the GUARDIAN, "the first of their friends, who then became legion." She listed many of the "politically dispossessed who have found refuge in the GUARDIAN's pages": the Rosenberg children, Morton Sobell, the 31 Florida contempt victims (who sent greetings and thanks to the dinner), the Louisville (Ky.) "sedition" defendants and

RING LARDNER JR., one of the Hollywood Ten, and a guest last year, paid us a return engagement with a wry but ominous account of the pro-McCarthy meeting held the previous night (see p. 1). Of the GUARDIAN, he concluded:

"We all regard it with affection and look forward to its arrival, but this is not quite the same thing as recognizing its absolute indispensibility. You have to consider its size in relation to the total output of newspapers and magazines in the country to realize how concentrated and powerful an antidote it is to some of the worst poison of our time."

We had hoped to have as guests also Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers Union, who was depresident of the United Electrical Workers Union, who was de-layed in Boston and could not attend; and Vivian Hallinan, wife of the 1952 Progressive Party candidate for President. Mrs. Hal-linan had to undergo an operation in San Francisco. She sent a telegram expressing her disappointment and reminding us that 1948 was the birth year of both the GUARDIAN and the youngest of the six Hallinan sons, "two of my favorite chil-dren." She wired: dren." She wired:

"I worry about the GUARDIAN and feel solicitous for its welfare. I am filled with pride in its courage and in its honesty. I look forward to each edition for the facts that I find nowhere else. There never has been an issue no matter how sensitive, that this paper has been afraid to tackle. The GUAR-DIAN reminds me so much of my own kids, always bloody but unbowed."

OUR OTHER PRINCIPAL SPEAKERS were Dr. Corliss Lamont, now waging a history-making defense of the right of the people to protection of the First Amendment; and Cedric Belfrage, whose closing address was a characteristically witty, biting but optimistic resume of the times we live in.

It remained for Lamont to evoke the evening's high point of laughter when he read from an attack on the GUARDIAN in the blacklist publication Counter-Attack. The editors of Counter-Attack.

of laughter when he read from an attack on the GUARDIAN in the blacklist publication Counter-Attack. The editors of Counter-Attack, it seems, have discovered the very latest in subversion, the GUARDIAN's current holiday greeting cards (see p. 12). What riled Counter-Attack most was one of the cards which shows a toy train winding over a track which spells out "Noel," but inside the track continues, and spells out "Peace"!

The evening's proceedings were tape-recorded and will be edited into what is bound to be a most enjoyable LP record. If you would like one mailed to you as soon as they are pressed, write now for details.

P.S.: The GUARDIAN's annual holiday letter has now reached all hands, if we have your address. If he haven't, a postcard will bring yours. We're anxious for your answer, because we like holiday remembrances as well as the next fellow. Shall we be hearing from you?

THE LAW

Civil liberties is the key at Lawyers' Guild meeting

yers Guild, embracing most of the leading U.S. progressive and liberal lawyers, has been fighting an attempt by Atty. Gen. Brownell to list it as "subversive." In a first-round skirmish the Guild won an Appeals Court stay the Guild won an Appeals Court stay of the administrative proceedings. The key importance to civil liberties of the Guild's fight, and its strength and breadth, were apparent at the Guild's 13th national convention Nov. 19-21 in Chicago's Congress Hotel. More than 600 lawyers and guests attended and $17,000 was collected for the fight at the concluding banquet, attended by many Negroes and 40 Packinghouse workers, from which many had to be turned away. A GUARDIAN correspondent wrote:

"People of obvious independent views, such as Chicago University law prof. Malcolm S. Sharp (elected the new president) and Yale Law School Prof. Thomas I. Emerson (awarded the Guild's Franklin D. Roosevelt award for conspicuous service to civil liberties) and others, are continuing in the leadership. This indicates the Guild's success in maintaining its broad, independent position in American life, while at the same time expressing itself more vigorously for preservation of the Bill of Rights. Convention observers felt that if the Guild can resist the attacks against it during the next two years, it will grow tremendously in years ahead."

ATTACKS & ADVANCES: Outgoing press. Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago, president of the Urban League, pointed to the progress made in 1954 against the drive to undermine constitutional laxing tensions abroad, and the great strides toward racial equality. Report-ing on "Threats to the Independence of the Bar," Guild vice-pres. Daniel G. Marshall of Los Angeles recalled that the U.S. District Court in D.C. last nell's effort to "list" the Guild "a usurpation of power by a government official."

As an example of the threat to law-yers participating in "framed" cases particularly designed to test the school segregation decision, it was reported that in East and West Baton Rouge (La.) parishes two Negro lawyers who tried to register Negro children in white schools are being "investigated" by the Bar for disciplinary action. Cali-fornia's Laurent B. Frantz stressing fornia's Laurent B. Frantz, stressing that the Supreme Court segregation decision "lays the basis for legal challenge to every aspect of the jimcrow system," urged that instead of relying wholly on test cases" everyone should

Coe, Michigan's Walter Nelson, Denver's chief probation officer Mrs. Mary Rose, journalist I. F. Alvarez del Vavo, speaking on "Co-Existvarez del Vayo, speaking on "Co-Exist-ence is Possible," said it would "never become a reality until we negotiate on Germany"; he predicted a serious up-heavel in Spain due to unpopularity of the treaty with the U.S. Nation editor Carey McWilliams, in a powerful attack

 Rejecting "the whole concept of heresy";

• Recognizing that "our freedom is our security";

Besides passing a resolution demandation to the properties of the prop

Political deportees — 1944 to 1952

In a detailed analysis of U.S. political deportations since the 1918 Act to deport "force and violence" group members or affiliates, the Lawyers Guild Review (Fall, 1954) comes up with these figures on deportees between 1944 and 1952 when there was a total of 375 deportation cases:

Out of 198 cases on which the facts were ascertainable, 190 had resided in the U.S. over 21 years, 157 were over 46 years old.

Out of 195 men and 134 women studied, 101 are parents of citizen-children, 24 have sons who fought in World War II or are now in the armed services.

Out of 181 for whom facts were available, 46% had applied once or more for citizenship.

Out of 181 for whom facts were available, for citizenship.

In less than 4% of cases did townspeople testify against the deportees at any stage. • The administrative proceedings lasted over 2 years in all of 193 cases studied, over 4 years in 127 cases.

Wesley Wells sues for his freedom

WESLEY ROBERT WELLS, 45-yearold Negro prisoner whom GUAR-DIAN readers helped save from the California gas chamber last April, filed California gas chamber last April, filed suit in Superior Court Nov. 29 for release from life imprisonment. The suit declared that 11 "instances of racial segregation practised against him by prison officials had deprived him of his rights as a U.S. citizen." Evidence accompanying the appeal showed that "because he was of Negro ancestry" he "was subjected to insults, indignities, boutal treatment and special punishment," all of which tended to deny him his rights under the 14th Amendment.

Wells was transferred five months ago from San Quentin to the Terminal Island Medical Facility for medical at-tention. He was sentenced to death in 1947 for throwing a cuspidor at and slightly injuring a guard. Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, shortly before he stayed

"TO SERVE THE PEOPLE": In a recent interview Wells admitted he had "made mistakes," and added that "to treat a man like an animal is to arouse the animal in him." He now felt his life was "in the hands of hundreds of thousands whom I don't know but who wrote to the Governor and saved my life." Wanting his life to be "a force to serve those people for the faith they put in me," Wells told the interviewer: "It seems to me California can dare like me, when to prove I am worthy give me a chance to prove I am worthy of something better than prison."

A Los Angeles newspaper reported that after five months in his new en-vironment Wells was a baseball umpire on Terminal Island, "scoring an amazing victory for the man . . . who was labelled so dangerous that his return to normal prison life might cause some-

Action on his appeal is expected within 30 days.

AN OPEN LETTER FROM FRANK SERRI TO HUBERT HUMPHREY

'America has had great parties but has them no longer'

On Sept. 13 Frank Serri, noted lawyer and president of the N.Y. Lawyers Guild, wrote a letter to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, chief proponent of the Communist Control Act of 1954. Below are excerpts of the letter.

Dear Senator Humphrey:

HAVE READ your letter to me of Sept. 7 and your

HAVE READ your letter to me of Sept. 7 and your analysis of the bill to outlaw the C.P.
Frankly, the most frightening thing is not the serious errors of judgment, but the fact that you, a liberal senator, are unconscious of the enormity of the evil you have committed.

1. To outlaw the ballot is to outlaw legal opposition and that is tyranny no matter what the subterfuse.

stiton and that is tyranny no matter what the subterfuge.

You can't destroy the political nature of a political party by the device of calling it a "conspiracy" by unconstitutional legislative fiat. That is a majority dictatorship at its worst. "That enactment is an act of violence," to quote Lincoln. . .

You have swallowed whole the McCarthy legend of a conspiracy of force and violence. There is no such conspiracy to overthrow our Government. There never has been in our time and there never will be—provided we remain democratic, constitutional and American.

In short, as long as we satisfy reasonably the expectations of our people, they will not resort to violence. How does Shakespeare sum it up in Coriolanus? "Are you all resolved rather to die than to famish?" That is the chief economic seed bed of violence. And the other, you are unwisely creating: for danger begins when you deny the ballot.

No group exists so idiotic as to plot the violent overthrow of our present U.S. Government. There have been prosecutions under the Smith Act for advocacy—a law which four Supreme Court judges have declared unwise—but never has there been an indictment that the C.P. leaders and members conspired to overthrow violently the Government of the U.S. This complete absence of any such indictment during the entire existence of the C.P. is powerful proof that no such conspiracy was ever dreamed of on land or sea.

2. Your Capone analogy is truly astounding.

2. Your Capone analogy is truly astounding.

Capone talked his violence with revolvers and machine guns. His opponents were not voted down, they were shot down. The C.P. has never been accused of possessing a cap pistol. Obviously, you are forgetting all our American history during the last 30 years. The C.P. has functioned peacefully as a minority political party; it has held local, state and national conventions; platforms were discussed, adopted and published; candidates from President down to councilman were put on the ballot; extensive public campaigns were conducted, papers and magazines were published, and radio and television used—when available; and a few local candidates were elected.

In that way it performed an essential jcb as a minority party effectively. It goaded and spurred the major parties; it acted as a severe critic; and it offered an alternative program for the public consideration. . . .

consideration...

Frequently, it has been the energy, the ideas, the day-to-day programs of the C.P. and other smaller parties which have been the arsenal of ideas for the improvement and strengthening of our democracy. This has been true government by discussion. For its preservation and development, a debt of gratitude is due to the minor parties, including the C.P.

preservation and development, a debt of gratitude is due to the minor parties, including the C.P.

3. The U.S. Government can protect itself effectively against violence, in fact more effectively, without nullifying the Bill of Rights.

Of course, every democratic government has the right to protect itself against a conspiracy to overthrow it violently. There has never been any dispute as to that principle. The First Amendment does not in any way stop the Government from swooping down swiftly on any group plotting and preparing for its violent overthrow. That is the field of violent, criminal action. The common law and the federal law for many years have provided against preparations and attempts at riot, insurrection, espionage, sabotage and treason. In that field, the Government may and must enter. But even in that field you must prove the charge in open court with valid evidence. Instead, you have charged conspiracy and stamped a political party guilty without any legal indictment, without any legal evidence, whout any trial in the open court room, and without any jury. If that does not rip the Bill of Rights, due process and fair trial to pieces, what does?

Worse still, you have confused that field of prohibited violence with the field of freedom into which

Worse still, you have confused that field of prohibited violence with the field of freedom into which the Government cannot trespass. You have lawlessly invaded the constitutionally protected field of thought, free speech and assembly. That field you cannot lawfully enter at all. . . Your bill shoots the Bill of Rights to ribbons. If that is constitutional, then Chiang Kai-shek is the President of the U.S. and Franco is our Vice-President.

4. By officially branding the members of the C.P.
as traitors, you outrival McCarthy at his foulest.

McCarthy libeled the Democratic record as one

McCarthy libeled the Democratic record as one of "20 years of treason," but he, at least, conceded

"You're not here to think, Mister."

mated that the Democratic Party could continue to function as a party provided it bent the knee to the Wisconsin Yahoo.
You go further. You do not merely make a speech as he did, you outlaw the entire C.P. Again, you forget your American history. In World War II alone, 15,000 members of the C.P. fought in the armed forces of our country, many died, more were wounded with real, not fake shrapnel, and a goodly number were decorated for bravery. Surely, such loyal conduct must raise a very strong presumption that the members of the C.P. are valiant and loyal Americans devoted, not to destroying our institutions, but to defending, improving and fortifying the democratic process. . . .

"America has had great parties, but has them 5. "Am no longer.

I am afraid that you are proving that DeTocqueville was right when he wrote the words quoted above. By your own actions you have laid a real foundation for an indictment that both major parties are conspiracies to pull down our democratic Constitution and to install government by terrorization in place of government by discussion. The tyranny of the majority is the clear and present danger menacing our country today. You are teaching minorities a terrible lesson to imitate in their turn:
a majority can do no wrong; might is right. That awful delusion has worked tremendous havoc upon mankind in the past. It will have the same disastrous consequences tomorrow unless you stop, lock, listen—and repeal all acts, including the outlaw one,
that nullify the Bill of Rights.

Rain falls on the glass houses of Atsumi

By Gordon Schaffer Guardian special correspondent

LONDON SOON after they had debated a bill SOON after they had debated a bill to call up young men for civil defense in time of war, MP's of both parties listened in a private room at the House of Commons to a Japanese scientist telling them what A- and H-bombs would mean to Britain's crowded population. Bevanite MP Harold Davies organized the meeting to hear Yasushi Nishiwaki, biophysics professor at Osaka University medical school, who was in charge of the investigations at Nishiwaki, Osaka into radioactive fish caught after the U.S. H-bomb test at Bikini. The press was invited but ignored the professor's warning. He politically, as a scientist. He spoke non-

DEATH DUST: On the effects radioactivity on growing crops he said:

"When rain fell on the glass houses in the Atsumi Peninsula in mid-March, the dust residue after it dried off was found to be radioactive to a degree of ten to 100 times above normal. Pumps were brought in and every inch of glass washed down. This was repeated a number of times before geiger counters showed radioactivity was beginning to lessen.

"In mid-May the same thing happened again. The same treatment was used, but each time it has rained since then the dust deposited by the rain has been radioactive.

"So far, because of the protection afforded by the glass, the soil does not seem to be contaminated, but any further H-bomb tests in the Bikini district could have disastrous effects on growers in this district.

"We know that the rain water that was contaminated by this dust has not yet reached the underground supplies. When it does we shall have another problem, for it is from this source that most of the growers draw their water.

"We have already found some vegetables, notably onions, contaminated by the dust. Their outer leaves appeared to be quite free, but when the bulbs were cut open the centers were radioactive.

"We know that the body accumulates radioactivity in the same way that it accumulates lead poisoning. Therefore if radioactive vegetables or fruit are eaten in quantity the effect will be cumulative.

effect will be cumulative.

"Some of the trace elements in the soil will continue radioactive for many years. Radioactive soil does not become sterile, but plants grown in it mutate. Mutations are useful when carried out on a planned scale by experienced men, but these caused by radioactivity are not useful. In time plants themselves become sterile and useless."

VEGETABLES & PEOPLE: Mishiwaki paused for a moment and then said: "This problem of sterility does not

"This problem of sterility does not apply to plants alone. It applies to human beings as well. The men who were showered with this terrible dust are losing their powers to reproduce their species. Like the plants which absorbed it through their roots and leaves, they had absorbed it through the air they breathed, and by the dust falling on their skins.

"Soon after the second rains fell in May we discovered that fields of vegetables in the area outside Osaka had been infected. These were tested with Beta Rays and gave a count of 86,000 a minute; the normal count is 20 a minute. Our problem was what to do with them. We tried out many ways and eventually had to use ordinary tap water—the only water that was not contaminated—to wash them. This reduced their degree of infection some.

A LIFE IN THE FIGHT FOR THE LIBERATION OF MANKIND

Andrei Vishinsky, the UN and world peace

By Tabitha Petrap

WHEN the UN opened its ninth Genwhen the UN opened its ninth General Assembly last September, its future looked bleak. Key issues of war and peace were being decided outside UN because Washington barred China from taking its seat. A feeling of impotence had resulted from Western use of UN as a "cold war" weapon against the socialist world; it was reinforced when U.S. Secy. Dulles, in an opening speech, locked already-closed doors to negotiation. A typical comment in those opening days was:

"Vishinsky will have to do some-thing to put this Assembly back on its feet or it will remain flat on its face."

The Assembly was put back on its feet. When Vishinsky died on Nov. 22, in the session's ninth week, it had already become known as "the agreement Assembly," "the most constructive in UN history." Behind the change lay what observers agreed was one of the most masterly performances in diplomatic memory: the success of the matic memory: the success of the U.S.S.R.'s first deputy foreign min-later in winning unanimous agreement to certain principles to govern renewed negotiations on control of nuclear weapons and disarmament. In so doing, Vishinsky opened the way to a new effort—blocked by the West for eight years—to rid mankind of the menace of nuclear war, contributing materially to a further relaxation of world tension

MAN'S ACHIEVEMENT: Changed military and power realities created the conditions for this achievement; but insofar as history is ever one man's work, the achievement was Vishinsky's: the result of his skill in negotiation, ability to find flaws in the opponent's position, persuasive powers untiring position, persuasive powers, untiring energy in answering every point—even silly and trivial ones raised by delegates who sought only the limelight. Under the warmth of his unfailing good hu-mor and wit the atmosphere in the Folitical Committee, during its three-week debate on disarmament and later discussion of the U.S. atom-pool plan, changed from cold formality and—on the part of some—open hostility to mear-geniality.

He died just as his struggle to transform UN into a real platform of intermational co-operation, an instrument of peace, was beginning to bear fruit; it was the UN's—and the world's tragedy. This thought was voiced again and again when delegates rose to pay tributes in a moving memorial session.

AND ANOTHER'S: But it was Win-

REV. GEORGE BISSONETTE
At a reception for the Yugoslav ambassador in Moscow last week, Father Bissonette, a Catholic priest from Central Falls, R. I., introduced himself to Nikita Khrushchev, first seey, of the Communist Party. He told Khrushchev
he was pleased that anti-religious agitators in the U.S.S.R. had been reproved for their violent statements.
Khrushchev agreed, then introduced Bissonette to Premier Malenkov as a "sympathetic man." He also told Bissonette that co-existence would have a better chance if "boring voices" like McCarthy's would shut up. Father Bissonette has been assigned to Moscow
by the Assumptionist Fathers, REV. GEORGE BISSONETTE

ANDREI VISHINSKY AND TWO FRIENDS For the young there was a ston Churchill who-indirectly and inadvertently—most clearly illumin Andrei Vishinsky's unique role as illumined champion of peace throughout the "cold war" decade. The responsibility for the "cold-war" was pin-pointed when Churchill, in Commons on Nov. 23, told how before the end of World as, told now before the end of world war II he issued orders to his top military commander looking to the rearming and use of Nazi troops against the Soviet armies, which had fought their way from Stalingrad to the German frontiers. He had proposed to take up Hitler's collapsed crusade even as allied troops were uncovering the horrors of Nazi concentration camps—and some 20 million Soviet citizens, six million Jews, hundreds of thousands of other nationalities lay tortured and dead at Nazi hands

His plans were blocked then by world public opinion. But his policy became U.S. policy, too, when Roosevelt died. To put it into effect required a vast effort to turn world public opinion against the U.S.S.R., and the UN was seized upon as a chief weapon in this campaign. From the first session in San Francisco, the West used its mechan-ical voting majority to destroy UN as a universal arena in which to seek agreements, and made it a Western weapon in the "cold war." The West outvoted the UN Charter at will, achieved arithmetical isolation of the Soviet point of view, used this to cloak with UN sanction its revival of Hitler's policies.

DEFENDER OF UN: As the U.S.S.R's chief UN representative from its incep-tion, Vishinsky was the outstanding fighter against this subversion of UN. He strove unceasingly to make it a real world organization, give it prestige and importance. Always in a minority—though he often spoke for the greater part of mankind (a 44 to 7 vote to part of mankind (a 44 to 7 vote to condemn China as an aggressor in 1951, for example, translated into populations was 546 million for to 1½ billion against)—he always fought for his position as if he believed it would win. Against Washington's steamroller he brought to bear great theoretical knowledge and culture, and broad understanding of today's world.

His appointment as permanent UN representative when Stalin died (he was foreign minister then) was not a "demotion" but a measure of the importance the U.S.S.R. attached to UN in its overall effort to reduce internain its overall effort to reduce international tension. Said a veteran UN

"Vishinsky so dominated UN that the U.S.S.R. was enabled to play here an almost fantastic role in be-half of peace. His loss is irreparable and comes at a crucial moment when he could have played a tremendous role in securing the peace."

AMERICAN TRIBUTES: In directing at him their most venomous fire, West-ern propaganda machines paid tribute to his effectiveness. Despite this unremitting hostility, he won popularity even among Americans. It was Vishineven among Americans. It was Vishin-sky that Americans came to see and hear at UN. When he was scheduled to speak, galleries were packed. When he died, some 3,000 Americans ignored press reports that the public would not be admitted, defied the FBI which took pictures of all who entered, to file by his bier. Some were curjosity-seekers. pictures of all who entered, to file by his bier. Some were curiosity-seekers, but the majority by far came because as a New Jersey doctor put it: "I wished to pay tribute to a great statesman who was a Daniel in the lions' den, a peaceful man among the warmongers." Or as a Brooklyn housewife said: "I loved the way he spoke on TV and it seemed to me whatever he said and it seemed to me whatever he said he meant" (World-Telegram, 11/23). His work for peace at UN was only one facet of a many-sided life. In the words of Poland's Julius Katz-Suchy,

he was not only

"... a revolutionary, politician, diplomat and statesman ... but also a great master of jurisprudence. His contributions to the theory of State and Law, to the development of Criminal Law and, in particular, to the theory of Judicial Evidence, his contributions to the development of international law ... are achievements not of the Soviet people only
... ibut also of the world science of international law. Who better than he could link up the principles of international law with their application, in everyday practice, in the struggle for international co-operation, based on an understanding of the basic principle that international law can only be a law of peace?"

THE FINEST CAUSE": A veteran of

"THE FINEST CAUSE": A veteran of the 1905 and 1917 revolutions, Vishinthe 1995 and 1917 revolutions, Vishinsky authored some 200 books, maintained his membership in the Soviet Academy of Sciences even when preoccupied with foreign policy. As State Prosecutor of the Soviet fifth column in the 1930's he put "the new Soviet state on stronger foundations," as the Equator IIN delegate speaking on her Ecuador UN delegate, speaking on be-half of the 20 Latin American delega-tions, pointed out.

Western newspapers painted this man, whose every word and action betrayed a deep love for everything that was humane, as some kind of mass murderer; yet they could not entirely ignore his stature. He might have been great, they said, if only he had not put his great abilities at the service of the Russian Revolution. Vishinsky's life in fact was a realization of Lenin's fact was a realization of Lenin's

"Man's dearest possession is life and it is given to him to live but once. He must live so as to feel no torturing regrets for years without purpose; so live as not to be seared by the shame of a cowardly and trivial past; so live that dying he can say all my life and all my strength were given to the finest cause in all the world—the fight for the liberation of mankind."

SUPREME COURT HEARING DELAYED

Brownell backs Southern states' demand for gradual desegregation of schools

O WIN NEGRO VOTES for Republicans, GOP campaigners in the fall election praised the Supreme Court's ban on jimerow public schools. On Nov. 24, three weeks after the vote was counted, Atty. Gen. Brownell urged the Supreme Court to recommend a "grad-ualist" form of integration, similar to that favored by some Southern states. The court was to have met Dec. 6 for hearings on how to desegregate and give its decision later. But Senate delay in confirming Justice John M. Harian forced postponement. Hearings are now expected in January or February.

The Administration's plan, a 30-page brief, called for integration of Negro and white public school students under supervision of federal district ccurts rather than by Supreme Court order. S. Carolina Gov. Byrnes said the brief supported his contention that the high tribunal should remand the Clarendon County suit (the original 1951 action against jimcrow schools) back to the against jimcrow schools) back to the district court for an order to enforce. District court judges are usually local citizens. Other Southern comment favored Brownell's proposal, though Georgia and Mississippi repeated threats to abolish public schools.

ON SOLID OBSTACLES: The NAACP said it would not comment until it had studied the brief. Brownell and the NAACP differed on speedy integration when the matter was argued before the Supreme Court last year. Brownell did say, however, in his Nov. 24 brief that where no "solid obstacles" to desegregation exist, "delay is not justified and should not be permitted" by the lower

Southern Education Reporting Service's Southern School News (11/4) gives this summarized account of integration progress:

- Three areas of earlier tension—W. Virginia, Baltimore and D.C.—were calm. Only in Delaware was there evidence of continued unrest.
- · Florida, N. Carolina, Arkansas and Texas were getting ready to intervene in the Supreme Court hearings.
- ◆ Voters in Georgia and Louisiana gave what AP called "one-sided" approval of "last-resort" amendments to preserve jimcrow schools.
- The "race issue" in Florida, Mary-land and Virginia was a subject of wide debate in the political campaign.

"Otherwise," the publication said,
"the region was quiet, including Missouri, where the beginnings of desegregation have so far produced no inci-dents whatsoever."

The American taxpayer foots the bills for cloaks, killers and lies unlimited

Spy rings are as firmly established a pillar of Communist propaganda as germ warfare. One can be sure that the Chinese Reds will find no lie too big to tell. . . . Washington has responded promptly to Peking's vindictiveness and duplicity duplicity.
-N. Y. Herald Tribune, Nov. 25.

SUCH was a typical U.S. press com-Such was a typical U.S. press comment on the Peking radio announcement that 13 Americans had been sentenced to from four years to life for espionage in China. They had been arrested, Peking said, along with scores of U.S.-trained Chiang agents who were transported in U.S. planes.

Washington called the charges "trumped-up," China's action "a new act of barbarism." Less than two weeks before, the last of three articles by Richard and Gladys Harkness on the operations of "America's super-secret operations of "America's super-secret Central Intelligence Agency," run by Secy. of State John Foster Dulles' brother Allen, had appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. The articles "revealed [CIA's] methods, how it gets its operatives and money, and its accomplishments—in Guatemala, Iran and behind the Iron Curtain." They revealed that what the 13 Americans were jailed in China for doing was exactly what CIA is spending "several behind sealed doors [made] a quick crash estimate" that arms bought in E. Europe by the Arbenz government were enough to enable the Guatemalan Army to crush her neighbors, Honduras and El Salvador, and to march across Nicaragua and Costa Rica to the Panama Canal."

(At the time the press documented [GUARDIAN, 7/19] that Guatemala bought the arms in E. Europe after Washington, supplying arms to all its neighbors, refused to sell any to Guatemala—and that the arms were second-mala—and that the arms were second-hand and of little use.)

The Harknesses related the "strang-er-than-fiction" story of Allen Dulles and Brig. Gen. Norman Schwartzkopf conspiring with Iranian Maj. Gen. Zahedi, the former pro-Nazi, to over-throw the Mossadegh regime. (The GUARDIAN reported, 8/31/53, Allen Dulles' trip abroad and Schwartzkopf's appearance in Iran immediately before appearance in Iran immediately before the Zahedi coup; pointed out that for-mer New Jersey police chief Schwartz-kopf had worked with Zahedi during 1942-1948 in building up Iran's secret

In Egypt, wrote the Harknesses, "when the time seemed ripe" to over-throw King Farouk, "skilled American operatives" indicated to "a pro-Ameri-can Egyptian military junta . . . how hundred millions a year" to do all over

DENIAL vs. ADMISSION: The timing lent a weird quality to the boiling denials of Peking's charges. The "revelations," said to have been the result of a year's research by the Herknesses, sought on the one hand to lard the CIA's activities with moral justifications and on the other to paint them in garish melodramatic colors, making free play with "sealed doors," "microfilm," codes, documents in "purplishblue ink" and "lie-detector tests." The result was to hold the CIA up to public DENIAL vs. ADMISSION: The timing result was to hold the CIA up to public ridicule as well as to negate any possibility that denials of "Iron Curtain" charges against it could ever carry con-viction. The articles:

iction. The articles:

• In effect proudly admitted—by coyly quoting Dulles as "neither confirming nor denying" them—"rumors" mentioned in Congress by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) that CIA "subsidized a Nazi-type organization in W. Germany which had marked leaders of the Social Democratic political party for liquidation"; that it was maintaining the Chiang bandit army in Burma about which that country bitterly but vainly protests in UN, "to make forays into Red China."

• Said "the CIA has clandestine

◆ Said "the CIA has clandestine channels leading to high satellite officials... intelligence lines to communist officials in positions of power and knowledge," thus implying justification for the controversial treason trials of officials in socialist countries.

SUBVERSION & SABOTAGE": Specifically, the SEP series confirmed ma-terial published in the GUARDIAN and elsewhere as to recent violent over-throwals of governments. It described the U.S.' arming of Col. Castillo Armas' forces against Guatemala's democratic regime, after "an emergency session of the Intelligence Advisory Committee such devious matters were best arranged." (The GUARDIAN at the time did not neglect to point out the possibility of Washington's involvement in the Egyptian coup.) And long before the SEP's "exclusive report" on CIA, Newsweek (2/2/53) disclosed:

"The U.S. has already been going in for . . . subversion and sabotage . . in an important way against the Reds on the China mainland."

DAGGERS UNDER CLOAKS: The Harknesses confirmed charges made in Indian and other newspapers that many professional Americans abroad are spies and agents-provocateurs. They wrote:

hey wrote:

"... CIA recruits are drawn from people whose natural covers in the field of letters, science, business, labor, agriculture or the professions fit them for spot assignments";

They are taught to do research, to collect and transmit information, to act as saboteurs "aiding and abetting freedom forces [and] nurturing indigenous freedom legions";

"... CIA-screened psychiatrists are on call to straighten out operatives who succumb to the pressure of leading double lives and suffer nervous breakdowns." (One SEP reader asked: "Who screens the psychiatrist who screens the psychiatrist who screens the operator suffering nervous breakdown?")

SEVER WEAR GALLUSES: The SEP

NEVER WEAR GALLUSES: The SEP "revelations"—presumably intended to startle—of CIA techniques which in fact have been commonplace in most countries' intelligence operations for countries' intelligence operations for years include blowing up railway trestles with plastic explosive, precautionary burning of headquarters wastepaper and a "rule against accepting anyone who makes an unsolicited application for a job." As an example of the care taken by CIA agents to avoid exposure, we are told that:

"FREEDOM FORCES" AND "FREEDOM LEGIONS"

Shaban Jafari, called the "Brainless One," ex-wrestler and gang leader (holding banner), boasted of stabbing Mossadegh's Foreign Minister Hossein Fatemi, recently executed. His gangsters terrorized people into voting for pro-Zahedi candidates in Iran's elections last March. Who paid the bill?

"It might be signing one's own execution order to pose as a European while wearing a pair of American red galluses. . . It would be suicide to be caught behind the Iron Curtain with American cigarettes. . ."

In an article series devoted to exposing most of the details about CIA, including Dulles' private address and a photo of the identifying sign outside the Washington headquarters, the most the Washington headquarters, the most piquant effect is produced by the many references to CIA "security" measures. We learn that, while "the main CIA building was disguised until recently," Dulles "discovered" it listed in the Washington phone book and found sight-seeing guides pointing it out to tourists as "the building where spies work." A Sherlock Holmes picture is painted of the "master spy" himself, "puffing a final pipeful of tobacco before bed... after he has read the rouning a final piperul of tobacco be-fore bed . after he has read the voluminous reports," with an opium pipe picked up in Chiang's China which, unlike Holmes, he keeps on a table but does not smoke. Like Fear-less Fosdick he is ever on the alert:

"Sitting preoccupied in an Army General's garden one night, Dulles suddenly blurted, "Look at that! There it goes again!" In a window across the way a bright light shone briefly, went out, came on again. "Signaling!" Dulles exclaimed. Investigation showed that the light was coming from an unshaded bulb hanging from the bathroom ceiling of a house where a noisy Saturday night party was going full tilt."

"BLACK" BILLIONS: For all their unconscious absurdities—and to some extent because of them, in view of the irresponsibility they imply—the articles present a picture to alarm the world present a picture to alarm the world and especially American taxpayers who foot the bill. One alarming domestic aspect is that Dulles is empowered to bring into the U.S. 100 aliens a year "in the interest of national security" or to promote "the national intelligence mission"; these, it may be assumed, include the arch-criminal security of post-litter Europe. The Harkpesses point out Hitler Europe. The Harknesses point out that the law setting up CIA, passed under the Truman administration, gives Dulles "virtually unbounded personal authority" under which he "need not voucher his multi-million-dollar appropriations." He does, however, file "routine expense accounts for all 'white' CIA operations," and

"... reports to the Bureau of the Budget and to a small group of members of Congress on an off-the-record basis for his secret, or 'black' expenditures . . . on a lump-sum area basis of so many dollars spent, say, in the Far East or Latin America."

"A GOOD GUESS": All the evidence, including the Harkness* articles, indicates that the CIA's work is mainly "black" and consists of outright bribery. The use of bribery to overthrow governments that "won't play" is of ancient lineage, but never before have such huge sums been available for it in the hands of such irresponsible persons. In this field the CIA has had great success; but there is little evidence justifying credit to Dulles' outfits in intelligence fields depending on the brain rather than the buck. World War II intelligence men recall the many tragic occasions when OSS agents recruited by Dulles, parachuted behind Nazi lines, fell right into the Gestapo's hands owing to bad planning and worse security.

Last week the screams of Washing-ton and press indignation continued against Peking's "vindictiveness, duplicity and barbarism" in jailing 13 Americans alleged to be spies. Yet this much, at least, was admitted in "The Mysterious Doings of CIA": that when Moscow announces the capture of a spy,

"...a good guess would be that the Russians actually apprehended an American operative one time out of three."

The sober Christian Science Monitor,

The sober Christian Science Monitor, pointing out (11/26) that "when an intelligence agent falls into enemy hands, his activities are always denied," considered (11/24) the "possibility" that "... some of these imprisoned airmen actually were working for U.S. intelligence services. The family of one Massachusetts man who was captured said he was understood to be connected with intelligence work."

Several hundred millions' buy plenty of blood and agony

'Several hundred millions' buy plenty of blood and agony
The "several hundred million dollars a year" which the SEP says CIA is spending is "several" times as much as Washington's annual grant and loan program for all Latin America, the inadequacy of which was attacked by Rep. James G. Fulton (R-Pa.) in Brazil last month. If "several" be taken as four, CIA's budget represents $10 a year from the pocket of every U.S. taxpayer. Here is an indication of what the taxpayer gets for his money, in the blood and agony of defenders of too-democratic or too-nationalistic governments marked for Washington-sponsored overthrow:

A letter from female relatives of pro-Mossadegh Iranians executed in October was released last month by the Women's Intl. Democratic Fedn. (13 Unter den Linden, Berlin) which claims to speak for 140 million affiliated women in 66 countries. It said: "The lives of more than 2,000 families are in jeopardy. Thousands of patriots are in prisons and concentration camps; dozens have already been massacred, killed in the streets by the police; in the last two weeks, 16 have been executed; many women have been imprisoned, beaten and tortured.

I ask you in the name of all Iranian mothers, mothers who have given their sons to be sacrificed for liberty, to protest to the Iranian government against these crimes."

In Guatemala, 20 Arbenz supporters were scheduled for execution by last week, with 80 more to die soon afterward. Protests were being urged to Guatemalan Ambassador Jose Cruz Salazar, 1614 18th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

U CAN STRIKE A BLOW.

YOU CAN HELP strike a blow against the growing national menace of the run-away shop.

For more than 50 years the American Safety Razor Co. has been making Gem razors, blades and other products in New York City. On October 28 this company threw 1,400 men and women workers out intethe street to join Brooklyn's unemployed. The company is running away to Staunton, Va., where wages are 75 cents an hour-$30 a week-a Jim Crow, open shop town.

Never Work Again

Many ASR workers have 30, 40 and as much as 50 years' service with the company. They may never be able to get other jobs.

The ASR workers' union, UE Local 475, had negotiated and signed an agreement for severance pay and pensions. The company went back on its agreement and is ruthlessly throwing its workers on the human scrap-heap, with no pensions or severance payments at all.

November 3, the day after election, police clubbed pickets away from the plant gates, to make way for trucks to start moving the machinery South.

There is no economic necessity for the runaway. American Safety Razor's profits are steadily increasing. It has just reported a nine-month profit of $1,413,396 as against $972,992 for the same period in 1953 and $569,771 in 1952.

UE does not oppose, but welcomes the development of industry in underdeveloped areas, wherever it adds to the national production of useful goods or services and contributes to the income and well-being of

But American Safety Razor's move perfectly fits the recent editorial comment of the Charlotte, N.C., "Observer," which declared that the South "was selling its strength and vitality at less than cost price. Industrialization offers the hope of deliverance from economic duress but industry that expects favors to exploit poverty only prolongs it."

Register Your Protests

We urge you to register your protest against the inhuman abandon-ment of American Safety Razor's 1,400 workers by writing to the company at 315 Jay Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., urging them to grant severance pay and pensions to their employees.

The secret of the movies

(Excerpts from an article by Waldo Frank in El Diario de Nueva York, Nov. 23; translated from the Spanish.)

IKE most Americans, when I am tired I turn to the movies as a kind of harmless opiate. Last summer I went three times. The first time I saw a "documentary" of Queen Elizabeth's visit to Jamaica. How brilliant the colors were! How immaculate everybody's clothing from Elizabeth's down to the humblest little Negro boy! How joyously the how and girls of the island.

the boys and girls of the island sang their welcome! Jamaica seemed a delightful paradise and all its people (most of them colored) were angels singing the glories of Milady. The "real" Jamaica, naturally, did not appear for a fraction of a second. The second film was The Cruel Sea, a story of British sailors defending convoys attacked by German submarines. The difficulties and anxieties of the war years were not concealed. What came to view was the cruelty in Man, not in the sea. But "You'll notice it conforms to basically the film was as idyltic Defense Department specifica-and sentimental as the one in tions as described in the little Jamaica. Here the filth, blood booklet, 'What to Do in an Air and sweat appeared and—since they were "necessities" to maintain the existing world, its institutions and its leaders—they were indispensable. The illusion of absolute justification for our social system was never put in doubt for a fraction of a second. culties and anxieties of the war

MORAL—REVERE THE BOSS: Some weeks later I saw The Caine Mutiny, one of the season's successes, a best-seller as a novel and a hit on Broadway. The story deals with a group of novel and a hit on Broadway. The story deals with a group of American officers aboard a small naval vessel who—to save the ship and their lives—during a storm rise up against the captain. The mutiny is inspired by an officer, an "intellectual" who throughout the war is engaged in writing a novel. He undermines the others' confidence in the captain and with help of a handbook of instructions teaches the first mate his "duty," and the first mate takes over and saves the ship.

Now comes the trick that accounts for the story's success. The intellectual officer turns out to be a coward and a villain. The neurotic and played-out captain is transformed into a victim and hero.

The audience that has sat passively through the film comes Authority, however senseless and dangerous, must be respected, and anyone who dares to "criticize" is an intellectual and, as such, an evil person. . . . The moral of this lesson and its application is clear: obey, defend and revere the boss; distrust the critics who probably are traitors.

ROBOTS OF CRIME: I like "gangster" films. They are usually well-made; they do not invade the profound and subtle problems of human existence, a sphere belonging to great art in which the popular American arts are invariably phony. In these movies the actors are admirably fitted to the cops-and-robbers cliche so that all goes well. So I waited anxiously to see Dragnet, a great and enormously popular TV and radio program recently made into a movie. I found that it had succeeded in becoming a caricature—a reductio ad absurdum—of the crime story.

Mechanization, which tends to invade our arts and our lives, here triumphs completely. The story develops like a machine here triumphs completely. The story develops like a machine with a time mechanism. The characters are dolls with monotonous lack of expression like the hum of a motor. They move tonous lack of expression like the hum of a motor. They move about like those figurines in the tower clocks of medieval cathedrals still to be seen in some German cities. With this difference, however: those figurines, moving to mechanical rhythms, are saints, turning about for the glory of God, while the cops and robbers of Dragnet move in rhythm for the glory of Crime.

The machinery of those who follow the law and those on the fringes of the law reduces itself to a mere formula; humanity is excluded. But as one must have human emotion, blood and violence is provided. There is a scene of murder so bloody and repulsive that only the anaesthetized nerves of a stupefied civilization could stand it... civilization could stand it. . . .

MASS HYPNOSIS: What is the result of all this? The movie MASS HYPNOSIS: What is the result of all this? The movie public—semi-hypnotized in a darkened chamber where each individual, man and woman, is fused into an anonymous mass—sees pictures of a world in which the inequalities of the social system are befogged by a sentimental "patriotism"; in which the stupid brutalities of war are ennobled by calls of "God and Country"; in which Authority—even when it is insane—is glorified and criticism is identified with cowardice and treason; in which crime is made bearable presented as part of a machine; in which the mechanization of Man is idealized as something esthetic and of value. esthetic and of value.

New housing law gets hearing Dec. 9

By Ione Kramer

TENANTS all over the city have been alerted for hearings before the City Council at 1 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 9, on Mayor Wagner's proposed amendments to the city's mulamendments to the city's multiple dwelling law. The amendments—first since 1901, and based on a two-year study by the Brooklyn Grand Jury—are an attempt to outlaw long-standing evils due to over-crowding.

Reaction of most tenant

Reaction of most tenant groups was similar to that expressed by the Brooklyn Tenants, Welfare and Consumers Councils. At their annual all-day conference Nov. 28, they hailed the up-dating of the laws as "something for which tenant groups have been fighting for years." But tenant leaders and housing experts warned of resulting hardships if the crowded conditions were to be suddenly declared illegal. These families "will have to find new places in which to live," warned Citizens Housing & Planning Council exec. vicepres. Ira Robbins.

WHERE TO GO? The N.Y. Reaction of most tenant

WHERE TO GO? The N.Y. World Telegram (11/19) posed the question: "How are people going to be given more room if there isn't enough to go around now? . . . Even the most optimistic experts would not predict these would be not predict there would be anything like enough new quarters to permit compliance with the law when it would become effective next July 1." Under present plans, 6,526

Under present plans, 6,526 low-rent apartments and a few hundred middle-income homes will be built by the city be-fore next Oct. 31. But hun-dreds of thousands of New Yorkers living doubled-up in small apartments, with whole families in a "furnished room," may be affected by proposed slum clearance. A "must," tenant leaders said, is the City
Housing Authority's request to build 8,000 new low-rent and 8-9,000 middle-income apart-ments in the next five years. Recommending that even more be built, the Brooklyn confer-ence called on Mayor Wagner and Gov.-elect Averell Harri-man to get more federal aid for building through reinstatement of the provisions of the Federal Housing Act of 1949, which Congress virtually killed in its last session.

SLIDING RENTS URGED: second recommendation of the Brooklyn conference was a state law to end discrimina-

"To assure that segregation is not perpetuated by our very desire to end slum housing," the conference urged a sliding scale of rents for present housing projects. Harlem Tenants Council exec. secy. Jesse Gray saw the new law as "a tool for the landlords to force mass evictions" unless it included provisions for relocating tenants. The proposed law will make the square footage of floor space in an apartment or room the basis for the number of legal occupants, as the Grand Jury recommended. Under the present standard (the number of cubic feet of air space) a land-

NEW RESTRICTIONS: law's aim is to establish by 1960 the standard of not more than two adults or children over 12 sleeping in the first 150 feet of floor space (roughly one room). Two children would count as one adult, and 80 square feet of floor space would be needed for each additional adult.

An example is the 3-room old-law tenement apartment at 436 W. 46th St. in Manhattan, where the Gonzales family tan, where the Gonzales family died of gas poisoning last month. The former standard would have permitted eight adults; the new law would limit occupancy to two parents, two children under 12, and two children under four. The section of the law forbid-

WHY NOT? "Now more than ever before it is vital to estab-lish the central relocation bureau for displaced tenants," Gray said. The Brooklyn Council resolved that the city should take responsibility for finding homes for families fac-

Roll 'em back!

A petition campaign urging the state Legislature to roll back the 15% rent increase and continue the increase and continue the rent control law, set to expire next May, was launched last week by the Brooklyn Tenants Council (7 New York Av., B'klyn 16). The petition also asks the removal from office of State Rent, Administrator, Joseph Rent Administrator Joseph D. McGoldrick and other members of the Temporary State Housing Rent Commission.

The group criticized Mc-Goldrick for administering the rent law for the benefit of landlords. Bedford-Stuy-vesant housing leader Mrs. Lois Salo said: "You need a spy glass to see the tenant's rights in the law." Tenant groups will mobilize to have the relocation provi-sion included when the law is passed. Harlem Tenants Council promised a delegation of 100 at the Dec. 9 hearings.

Another section of the proposed law will demand that the name of every house's owner be posted, along with the legal number of occupants, in each building. The former is a provision tenant groups have urged for years, to end the landlord practice to end the landlord practice to end the landlord practice of dodging responsibility through phony real estate companies or unavailable agents. Marc will always be remembered by all as a man of honesty and integrity and one who always fought uncompromisingly for the people. The highest tribute we can pay to him is our firm pledge to continue the fight he waged so valiantly. Therefore this Natl. Committee of the Progressive Party unanimously urges full attendance at the Vito Marcantonio Memorial Meeting Dec. 7 at Manhattan Center in New York. We further urge all state organizations and other progressives to send supporting messages and financial contributions to the meeting in memory of one of America's foremost fighters for peace and democracy. To the above, we of the GUARDIAN respectfully say "Amen!"

PP supports Marc Memorial

The National Committee of the Progressive Party, at its recent meeting in New York, voted the following resolution supporting the memorial for Vito Marcantonio, a founder of the PP:

MITO MARCANTONIO left a legacy of political struggle for the rights and welfare of the American people. His devotion to the cause of world peace was unparalleled in the Congresses of this generation. We enthusiastically support the efforts to record for present and future generations his magnificent accomplishments through the publication of his congressional speeches and a biography covering his political life and contributions to American democracy.

THE ALP'S ALBANY OBJECTIVE:

Democrats to be held to pledges

Irving Blumberg, member of the American Labor Party's political affairs committee, summed up the N.Y. state political picture as seen by the executive committee of the ALP. Here are excerpts:

THE pre-election Democratic campaign pledges together post-election statements Gov.-elect Harriman prowith vide a framework—incomplete though it may be—for mount-ing a real fight for success on a few major issues.

True, we have a situation rife for legislative maneuverings—a Republican majority and a Democratic administra-tion. Here the Democrats can pass as champions of the people—seemingly fighting but without real vigor for the achievement of their party's stated goals. If the Republicans nullify their efforts so much the worse for the Republicans, come the 1956 elections! The Democrats can fight just short of winning—and this is the major danger to be met.

SPRINGBOARD: To assume that the banker Harriman will go down the line to fulfill his commitments would be folly. To understand, however, that his and the Democratic Party's public pledges can serve as springboard for the people mass pressure is wisdom. people's

Their [the Democrats'] program on a state scale calls for rengthened rent control, ollbacks "where justing justified";

BAD STUFF: Together with this good sounding program the Democrats in N.Y.C. and in Albany are reportedly working out plans inconsistent with the welfare of the people. For example in N.Y.C. there remains the danger that the fisproblem may be met by a y payroll tax—earlier supported by Mayor Wagner and Tammany leader DeSapio.

There are still dismissals of union teachers in our schools and the beginning of "risk" dismissals in transit by Mayor Wagner's local McCarthyite, Wagner's local McCarthyle, Peter Campbell Brown. There is the Harriman appointment of Myles Lane to prepare new witch-hunt legislation in Alwitch-hunt legislation in Al-bany—and no talk of repealing the Feinberg law. There is Con-troller Gerosa's warning about a "tight" capital budget—which a "tight" capital budget—which again means insufficient funds for school construction and other essential public construc-tion. There is no talk of the city's undertaking a realistic reassessment of big realty....

The job ahead is to force the Democratic Party in Albany to put up such a fight on the is-sues, as to make it politically unwise for the Republicans to balk the pressure and to trans-form the usual sham Albany battles into real battles. The lever for this fight can be the Democratic Party's own cam-paign pledges. This means community legislative conferences: radio and TV time; work with other community groups on local problems—especially at hearings before city bodies on the capital and expense budgcommittee hearings Albany; group conferences with legislators; public statements; conferences addressed by legis-

Young voters meet Dec. 9

Committee has sparked the Greenwich Village ALP Club politically and socially with such success that the ALP has set up a N.Y. county-wide Young Voters Committee with an organizing session sched-uled for Dec. 9, 8:30 p.m., at 28 Greenwich Av. Muriel (Mickey) Scheinman, ALP candidate for State Senator in the last election, asked clubs to send delegates. She said the meeting would be a workshop on what young peo-ple wanted and how ALP could organize them.

The Greenwich Village YVC found young voters (21-30) worried about schools, the draft and housing. They came to ALP meetings, developed their own speakers, held their own street meetings, tossed socials, did a good job, had

AT ST. GEORGE

Anti-runaway rally Dec. 6

THE N. Y. C. locals of the United Electrical Workers have called a public rally at Brooklyn's Hotel St. George Monday evening, Dec. 6, to mobilize opposition to the the American Safety Razor Company's flight from Brooklyn to Staunton, Va.

The ASR plant on Jay St. is still being picketed daily by its locked-out workers and their sympathizers, and UE has launched a nation-wide campaign to boycott ASR goods. Last week a sound truck toured city streets placarded with boycott posters.

The Dec. 6 raily will also open a campaign to press newly elected state and Congressional officials to act against runaways, raise the gressional officials to act against runaways, raise the minimum pay to $1.25, estab-lish fair employment practices and lower taxes

McCarthy rally

McCarthy, the speeches deftly steered away from the Senator. He did not appear and though there were closed-circuit broadcasts from California and Utah, none was hooked up with Washington to hear him. The generals, admirals, captains and colonels on the platform made it a rally for war now.

LET'S HAVE A FIRE: The high military brass (retired) seemed unwilling to be lieutenants in McCarthy's movement. They yielded to only a few civilians (ex-Gov. Edison, Utah's Gov. Lee speaking from Salt Lake City, attorney John Francis Neylan from San Fran-cisco), and allowed only a few minutes of introduction to Mrs. Jean McCarthy and her mother.

Dr. Godfrey Schmidt, constitutional law prof. at Fordham University, of-fered this antidote to fear of A-bombs:

"There is one thing worse than thermonuclear warfare today and that is to be defeated in it... The one that puts in the first blow is the one that strikes the telling one."

Blockade of China and a continuous witch-hunt were the line hammered home, but the audience was in no mood for any detailed policy speech. They cheered most when the oratory was vague and frenzied. Major Al Williams, former Marine flier and master of cere-monies, stirred the crowd when he said: "Evidently the prairie is dry in the country-and the prairie is on fire."

"THE HIDDEN FORCE": Ex-Marine Lt. Gen. Del Valle brought rebel yells when he promised "a long and perhaps even a bloody fight." He did not say where or against whom. Rear Admiral John G. Crommelin identified the enemy as "the hidden force." Former Chief of Naval Operations Adm. W. H.

(speaking from San Diego) foe was a "small but high-Standley said the pressure group with head-in New York." Each faction powered in this loosely-knit audience had its own special hate. When Gen. Del Valle, in an attack on "the doctrine of co-existence," asked, "Who wants to shake those bloody hands?" there came cries of: "Lehman, Lehman, Lehman."

Other hates, expressed by catcalls, were: President Eisenhower, Truman, Acheson, Sens. Flanders (R-Vt.) and Acheson, Sens. Flanders (R-Vt.) and Fulbright (D-Ark.) (denounced as a "typical Rhodes scholar"), and FDR. The Communist Farty was scarcely mentioned; the targets were plainly bigger. The "hidden force" was seemingly everywhere, including the White House. Col. Wm. F. Heimlich, former director of the U.S. radio in West Berlin, told the cheering crowd: "If we had guts at the top of this land China would be blockaded today." The President was denounced also for his "blackout order" keeping classified information from McCarthy.

AMERICA TO THEM: The crowd had its heroes, too. Sen. McCarthy was referred to as "the greatest patriot since Lincoln" and "the fighting Irish Marine." His gift of insult won praise from Dr. Schmidt, who wished he had "the wit" to coin McCarthy's epithet about "the guts" of Sen. Hendrickson. Other heroes: Rep. Martin Dies, the late Sen. Pat McCarran, Gen. Douglas late Sen. Pat McCarran, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Hearst columnists George Sokolsky and Westbrook Pegler (who was introduced from the audience), America Firster Hamilton Fish (on the platform) and McCarthy's former assistant Roy Cohn. (The GUARDIAN spotted a man resembling Gerald L. K. Smith like a twin. He said his name was Phillips but when other reporters pressed him, fled the Garden, dedging photographers.) photographers.)

Cohn was found by cameramen Pegler's box. For three minutes while the crowd cheered (with a few well-hushed boos) Cohn shyly resisted efforts to bring him to the platform. He yielded in the end while people shouted: "Roy for Senator," and was led to the microphone. He was grateful for all that America had done for "his people," and told his yelling audience:

Joe McCarthy and I would rather have American people of this type than all the politicians of the world."

Mrs. Swanson's antidote

By mid-week it seemed that Joe Mc-Carthy was running out of politicians. There was still maneuvering behind the scenes for a softening of the Sene censure resolution. His ten days Bethesda Naval Hospital had given time to show the Republican Party his strength across the country. Monday night's rally was a test, and it seemed a failure.

Only in the rally's closing minutes, in response to a shouted question from the audience, did a spokesman report on the number of petition signatures against censure. Accountants had counted 1¼ million so far, it was said, and the job would take ten more days.

The empty seats in the balcony were ne testimony of McCarthy's failure of far. Mrs. Winifred Swanson of Palmer, Mass., set out to record more positively some of the anti-McCarthy feeling in the country. Opposing the military brass heading the "Ten Million Americans" for McCarthy, Mrs. Swan-son started "Twenty Million Americans for Censure of Sen. McCarthy" and restricted all posts of leadership to privates (retired).

THE STRAW AND THE VIRUS: The movement spread quickly to Boston and Harvard University, Connecticut

FUNDS FOR FLORIDA

Last week's story on the Mlami, Fla. witch-hunt said fight-back funds were being col-lected by the Greater Mlami Constitutional Defense Committee (Box 1704, Mlami Beach, Fla.) That committee is spearheading pro-test activities there, Funds are being col-lected by the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, 421 Seventh Av., New York 1.

and New York. In N.Y. City Mrs. J. Shapiro, 23, of 1695 Topping Av., Bronx, watched a TV broadcast of Sen. Case (R-S.D.) in which he announced he would vote against censure on one count. To Mrs. Shapiro it was "the She wrote a three-line letter to the N. Y. Pest and in a few days was snowed under with 150 answering let-ters and countless phone calls, all answering her plea for anti-McCarthy all sentiment.

She telephoned Mrs. Swanson in Palmer and since her husband is a private (ret.) he qualified for the N.Y. City chairmanship of the "Twenty Mil-lion Americans."

Mrs. Shapiro and friends mimeographed petitions and in one hour last Saturday four college girls standing on W. 34th St. gathered 1,000 signatures. Calls for petitions came from upstate and Long Island. In Levittown, Lawrence Alexander, a polio victim still using an iron lung offered victim still using an iron lung, offered his services. He came out of the army a corporal and therefore had to take the title of secretary, not chairman, of the Nassau County division.

Alexander is the author of Iron Cradle (Crowell, $3), a book of encouragement to polio sufferers. He said he meant his book to tell people they "can do more than they think they can"; perhaps, he added, that applied to McCarthy as well as polio.

ALP LOOKS AT ITSELF

Lone voice for independence till labor builds own party

At the first post-election meeting of the Executive Com-mittee of the American Labor Party on Nov. 23 Exec. Seey. Morris Goldin analyzed the election returns and closed his report with this view of ALP's future:

THE American people are apparently several steps ahead of the politicians but not yet ready to run with the present ALP or Progressive Party. It seems that the American people generally like our program but not wrapped in the package we give it to them. And yet, it is quite apparent that none of the present political storekeepers are willing to sell our program except in a corrupt or distorted form.

An independent political voice therefore is necessary to challenge the bipartisanship on the issue of German rearmament, the attacks on our Constitution, the violation of civil rights. There is no of civil rights. There is no other voice. And speak on these we must, and urge oth-ers to speak with us, to act with us, to act alone if not with us, so long as we can get more and more people moving in the direction of action on behalf of the realization of our program. We must speak out for example right now on the [McCarthy] censure motion.

FOUR POINTS: A center for independent political action, by whatever name, is a must so long as there exists no alternative group with our program or the most substantial part of our program which can say clearly and logically: We have your program, and we can sell it better than you can.

Such a center must: (1) keep together organizationally such clubs and district organizations that can make a continuing contribution to the growth of independent political activity; (2) build or organize new clubs where it is commonly deemed necessary;
(3) devise activity by which we can bring our program to ever-widening circles of people in other groupings or organizations without the rigidity which characterized our work in the past; (4) run such candidates in such areas, at such times when we estimate they will advance the cause of independent political action.

Labor must in the interest of its own existence and defense, come into increasing conflict with the drive towards war and reactionary repression. . . . It will inevitably seek to solve some of these problems in the political arena because it is in that arena where it lost most of its rights. Here its aspirations will come into conflict with the entrenched machine politicians. Labor's increasing voice in politics must lead inevitably to an emergence of a grouping which must seek real power by challenging the current political leaders of the party which most workers consider their political home.

THE ULTIMATE GOAL: process has begun, it will grow, Our independent political activity must be part of this general stream, helping programmatically, and organizationally where we can be of build a powerful movement for independent political action . . . towards the ulti-mate realization of a national party of labor, farmers and the Negro people.

In my judgment the move-ment has begun . . . and this election campaign has served as a stimulus towards it. We must welcome every such development . . and when it does emerge, then—and only then—the question of our dis-appearance as an independent political force may be intelli-gently discussed. Until then, is the character and scope and vigor of our work which will help determine how fast how deep the realignment will be.
